Hoover Invites Roosevelt.
A River Turned Aside.
Who Killed Miss Merrill?
One Night to Florida.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 15.

PRESIDENT HOOVER has invited Gov. Roosevelt, who will be President next March, to the White House to discuss foreign loans and unite in a recommendation to Congress. This interesting invitation is absolutely new in American politics.

In view of the long, and at this time unnecessarily long, interval between election and actual inauguration, it would seem that the President-to-be and the President might well consult frequently for the good of the country.

To run one kind of administration without modification up to March 4 and suddenly break into another set of ideas seems scarcely desirable. It would not be done in any other business.

ON THE OTHER hand it is conceivable that Gov. Roosevelt may want to keep his hands and mind clear of any agreement while studying problems, reserving definite action until his term begins.

Gov. Roosevelt's attitude on foreign debts, his willingness or unwillingness to transfer the load from the shoulders of Europe to the shoulders of American taxpayers, is not known.

But it is known that at least 90 per cent of our people see no good reason why they should pay in taxes the debts that the people of other countries incurred directly or indirectly and spent in the big war.

If Gov. Roosevelt acted merely as a politician, which is not his habit, he would say, regardless of his own views on foreign debts:

"Let President Hoover add this to his other worries. There is no reason why I should step in and make recommendations that might cause my administration to begin in public disfavor."

ON THE SITE of the great Hoover dam, the Colorado River for ages has rushed with its millions of gallons per minute through the high rock walls of a narrow canyon.

It follows that path no longer, for man's engineering genius has turned the river aside, forcing it to run through an artificial tunnel, dug in one of the canyon's rocky sides, almost a mile high.

WHERE THE river once rushed through a channel cut out of solid rock by the water ages ago, everything is dry. Engineers and workers at the great dam, undisturbed by the torrent, will proceed to erect a wall that will hold back billions of gallons of Colorado waters, to be used as man may decide, for irrigation or power.

When the wall is finished the tunnel will be closed, to open at any time when water behind the dam needs lowering.

THE GLOOMY should be encouraged by this "incident" in modern engineering. Turning aside one of the world's great rivers, man provides, in one year's work, a channel of solid rock that nature's power could not have carved out in less than many centuries.

The thing is supposed to have been done long ago in Mesopotamia, when a great king, according to one story, wanted to take his soldiers across the river bed, dry shod, to attack a city.

According to another story, he wanted vengeance on the river for having drowned his favorite horse. But that meant only digging a trench; no rocky canyon there.

YOU MIGHT consider this question:

If man, only 12,000 years from the late stone age and the sharpened flint, can turn the course of a river, fly through the clouds and travel under the sea, what will he do 12,000 years hence and 12,000,000 years hence?

Science proves that the life of the earth, warmed by the sun, will last hundreds of millions of years longer. Plenty of time for good work.

MEN TURN a great river from its course now and build sea walls that stop the ocean. In Holland they have recently taken thousands of acres from the sea and made them into farms.

The future will see a race of flying men, living on high hills and mountain tops, diverting the intense heat of the equator toward the poles, as the Colorado River is diverted, regulating the temperature, atmosphere and winds of this planet as easily as the temperature is regulated in a modern hotel.

"It hath not yet been shewn what we shall be." That is no exaggeration.

EDGAR ALLEN POE should be alive and in Natchez, Miss., to write about the strange murder of an old lady, Miss Jane Surget Merrill. At the entrance to her ancient plantation near Natchez, in Mississippi, she kept posted a sign, "Visitors not welcome."

There are many visitors now; the railroad has put in a siding to carry travelers from all over the South, hurrying to the scene of a most strange crime.

Miss Merrill, 72 years old, who lived alone in her father's house, built 120 years ago, once visited the Belgian, English and other European courts, when her father represented this country in Belgium.

"Belle of the Old South," she lived a recluse, receiving only occasional and rare visits from an elderly gentleman whose name had been romantically associated with hers long ago.

NEARBY, IN a dilapidated old castle, called by neighbors "Goat Castle," there lived amid the ruin and wreckage an old

HOOVER ASKS ROOSEVELT PLEDGE

President Requests Support on Debts in Wire to Governor

Today's developments in the foreign debt maelstrom:

1—President Hoover let it be known he would take no action toward an extension of the moratorium without a pledge of support from Gov. Roosevelt.

2—The President-elect, agreeing to a White House conference, asserted he would not shoulder responsibility "which now rests" with President Hoover and the present Congress.

3—Belgium formally joined the parade of debtor nations appealing for postponement of the December 15 payment.

4—Opposition of an aroused Congress was intensified by intimations the foreign nations' pleas would be followed by others applying to private debts.

5—Word from Paris was to the effect the debt move was only the opening phase of an European movement to ensnare the United States into far-reaching security and economic schemes.

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Any effort on the part of the Hoover administration to secure a further extension of the European debt moratorium from Congress will be contingent on a public pledge of support by President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt.

President Hoover will take the position, when he engages his successor in next week's history-making conference, that a united front must be taken in dealing with the allied demands for extension and revision of war payments. The Governor's wire accepting the White House invitation was received last night at Hutchinson, Kan.

Somerset Recluse Slain

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 15.—State police and county officials seeking a motive for a brutal murder today are delving into the life of John C. Erdlen, 72-year-old recluse, a former Pittsburgh district resident. His mutilated body was discovered in a creek bed near here last night.

The torso, with the head, arms and lower portion of the body missing, was discovered hidden beneath a pile of stones in a creek on the Erdlen farm in Larimer Township late yesterday by a searching party, headed by Constable D. R. Cramer, according to Mrs. Emily Fluke, coroner. The dead man had been missing since last Wednesday, Mrs. Fluke said.

STAINS ON SAW

Police said ashes that might be those of the skull and limbs were found in stoves at the farmhouse and in a nearby woodshed. A blood-stained saw was also discovered hidden on the farm, police reported.

There was no evidence of robbery.

Neighbors said Erdlen, who lived alone on the farm, moved to Larimer Township about eight years ago.

BROTHER LOCATED

William I. Erdlen, of Anderson road, Shaler Township, said today that John C. Erdlen, slain at his farm home near Sand Patch, Somerset County, was his brother, formerly a resident of Swissvale, who moved to the farm four or five years ago.

William Erdlen said he had not seen his brother for about a year. The brother formerly was employed as a machinist in Swissvale. He was not married.

A small checking account in the First National Bank at Pittsburgh in the name of John C. Erdlen, Sand Patch, R. D. 2, was withdrawn August 31.

William Erdlen said he did not believe his brother had any considerable wealth.

DAVIS FACES ELECTION CONTEST

Democrats to Attack Hoover Count; Vote Frauds Charged

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—S. Davis Wilson, Philadelphia attorney, said today that contests of the Pennsylvania vote in both the presidential and United States senatorial elections last week would be filed soon.

The senatorial contest against the re-election of Senator James J. Davis will be filed in the Senate within 30 days, Wilson said. The electoral college election, he said, also would be contested in the Dauphin County courts.

RUPP UNDECIDED

Wilson said he was not sure that Lawrence Rupp, of Allentown, Democratic candidate for the Senate who was shown defeated by Davis in the unofficial count, would file the senatorial contest. Wilson, who is Rupp's attorney, said Rupp had wired him to "look out for his interests," and that the contest would be filed.

In reply to Wilson's statement, Senator Davis authorized publication of a letter from Rupp congratulating Davis on his victory.

Wilson said he was confident the House Campaign Committee investigation of Pennsylvania elections would show sufficient votes were obtained by illegal means to give both Rupp and the Democratic national ticket substantial majorities.

TO PRESENT CHARGES

Wilson was here today to go before the House committee to present reasons which he believed would show an investigation of the Pennsylvania elections was justified. Wilson was appointed counsel for a subcommittee consisting of Representative Loring Black (Dem.), of New York, named by the full committee to investigate elections in Delaware and Pennsylvania.

If the committee ordered hearings on the elections, Wilson said, the first hearings would be held in

LIBBY HOLMAN REYNOLDS . . . MURDER CHARGES DROPPED

STATE DROPS MURDER CHARGE

Torch Singer, Walker Spared Trial in Reynolds Killing

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Murder charges, which have been hanging over the head of Libby Holman Reynolds, one-time toast of Broadway, were dropped today by the state of North Carolina.

Solicitor Carlisle Higgins went before Judge A. M. Stack in Forsyth County Superior Court and asked that a nolle prosse, subject to the approval of the court, be entered in the case charging Libby and Ab Walker, of Winston-Salem, with slaying young Smith Reynolds, her millionaire husband, last July.

Higgins based his request on the grounds of insufficient evidence.

Judge Stack concurred, and at 12:20 p. m. directed that the motion be formally recorded.

LIBBY ABSENT

Neither Mrs. Reynolds nor Walker was in the courtroom, but both were represented by attorneys.

In ordering the motion recorded, Judge Stack directed that the defendants be discharged and their bonds released.

Stack said he was not familiar with the evidence except as he had read it in the newspapers, but if that was all, or nearly all the state had, he seriously doubted if it would have been possible to secure a conviction.

The judge added that if the case had been brought to trial before him he would have asked to be excused because of his friendship with W. N. Reynolds, wealthy horseman and uncle of the dead youth.

Higgins read a prepared statement saying that in asking for a nolle prosse he is leaving the way clear for prosecution should any evidence which may be discovered in the future warrant a reopening of the case.

He can bring the two defendants to trial merely by appearing before a judge and asking that the case be reopened on the grounds of newly discovered evidence.

COURSE APPROVED

Both defense attorneys and members of the wealthy Reynolds family, which inaugurated the movement to drop the charges against Libby and Walker, expressed approval of the course taken by Higgins.

Benet Polikoff, speaking for Mrs. Reynolds, said a nolle prosse is satisfactory to the defense, and this statement was concurred in by W. N. Reynolds and his attorneys. W. M. Hendren, representing the Reynolds family, said the family approved of the state's action.

Polikoff said he would immediately get in touch with Mrs. Reynolds, who has been in seclusion since she surrendered to authorities some months ago and was released on bail. He said he might possibly have a statement from the former Broadway favorite later in the day.

S. Porter Graves, another member of defense counsel, said the state's course in dropping the charges precluded a statement in court, but that the defense may issue one later. He said he was

RUTH, IN TEARS, WINS DIVORCE

RENO, Nev., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Ruth Elder Camp, noted aviatrix, obtained dissolution of her third marriage, that to Walter Camp, motion picture producer, here today. She testified she and Camp had been unable to live happily together.

Tears were running down her cheeks as Miss Elder, who was given the right to resume her maiden name, came from the courtroom. She said, holding up her two fists:

"A great big lump, this big, came up in my throat and I just had to cry. It was awful. Yesterday a letter came from Walter in which he asked me to come home for Thanksgiving dinner, and I hardly knew what to do."

Court attaches said that Miss Elder had cried throughout the hearing, which was held behind closed doors before Judge Thomas F. Moran.

Armstrong had the disease a year or two ago.

County Files Answer on Hall Site

Describing an agreement between the former county commissioners and the Schenley Farms Company for purchase of the Nicola Town Hall site as "contrary to public policy," thereby nullifying the contract, the present commissioners today replied to a writ of mandamus obtained by the company.

The writ was obtained by the company in an effort to compel the county to go through with its agreement to buy the Oakland hall site at $8 a square foot.

SON OF INSULL TESTIFIES

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—(INS.)—For the first time since the collapse of the Insull utilities empire, a member of the Insull family submitted to questioning before a bar of justice today.

He was Samuel Insull, Jr., who recently returned to Chicago after helping his father in his flight to Athens, Greece.

Taking the witness stand in Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley's court, Insull told of the last desperate attempts made to save the Corporation Securities Company and the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., from bankruptcy.

Questioned by Attorney Harold F. White, representing creditors in their search for assets, Insull told how the two investment concerns found themselves without available collateral in the face of a declining market.

He went from bank to bank in Chicago, he said, seeking agreements that the companies would not be sold out. This, it was brought out, was the beginning of the "standstill agreement" between New York and Chicago institutions, whereby it was hoped to "freeze" the companies' loans until the market improved.

3 Holding to Rock Rescued From River

COLUMBIA, Pa., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Shouting for help and clinging to a partly submerged rock for more than an hour, three youths were rescued from the Susquehanna River.

Salem Wall, 17; James Wall, 18, and Salem Schlotthauer, 20, were duck hunting. Their boat overturned and they were unable to swim. They reached the rock. David Lease, who resides near the river heard them. He and Perry Miles rescued the boys in a boat.

ARMY TO GUARD WALES IN ERIN

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—More than 12,000 men will guard the Prince of Wales when he arrives here tomorrow to dedicate the new Parliament Buildings at Stormont.

Four thousand of them will be armed, and all of them are a part of the elaborate precautions to be taken for the safety of the heir to the British throne during his three-day stay in the capital.

Only a few weeks ago Belfast was the scene of violent street fighting, and although this rioting was not connected with the Prince's visit, some groups in Northern Ireland have announced their hostility to his presence.

So complete have been the precautionary steps that the whereabouts of the heir to the throne at any given moment while in Belfast will be an official secret. The time of his arrival may not be announced more than a few hours in advance.

Mrs. Coleman's Auto Sprays Paint on Chief

Chief of Police C. A. Livingston, of Dravosburg, received a sample can of paint today and went out to test it by painting a traffic line in the middle of the borough's busiest thoroughfare.

The chief set down the can momentarily to direct the traffic, he reported, when an automobile driven by Mrs. William H. Coleman, of McKeesport, wife of the Republican county chairman and former congressman, upset the can, the contents splashing over Livingston's hitherto spotless uniform.

The chief blew his whistle. Mrs. Coleman, he reported, halted her car in the middle of a hill then resumed her journey, apparently not knowing what had occurred. Livingston overtook her, he said, and she agreed to pay for having his uniform cleaned.

Ride Donkey, Eat 'Crow' To Pay Election Bets

The conservative gent who said this was a funny old world must have been chuckling to himself today.

In the West End last night two gentlemen mounted one donkey and rode uncomfortably here and there, accompanied by the Veterans of Foreign Wars band from the Albert Baker Post. They were Edgar B. Hallock, president of the Pittsburgh Glove Manufacturing Company, and William Bell, of the Fox Brick Company.

In Pitcairn everybody in town tried to crowd into Ben Lear's barber shop to watch Councilman William Bennett, a disillusioned Republican, eat crow, and George Skinner, a proud Democrat, partake of chicken. When they had both had their fill a mistake was discovered—Bennett's crow turned out to be a palatable pigeon.

Needless to say, these exhibitions were caused by election bets.

DEMOCRATS RUSH BEER BILL FOR OPENING OF CONGRESS

SOUTH TO JOIN IN MOVE FOR SPEED

Agreement Sought Before Sessions Begin Dec. 5

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Congressional anti-drys today planned pre-session conferences to frame a beer bill for introduction in the House immediately after the gavel falls December 5.

The movement aims to speed a vote and the ironing out of marked differences over the nature of a modification measure.

The overwhelming victory of Democratic congressional candidates on the party's wet platform has caused many enthusiasts to propose far more liberal provisions than were urged last session.

CHIEF DIFFERENCES

The chief division thus far revealed is whether Congress shall provide for the old-time 5-cent glass of beer or merely allow it to be sold in bottles.

In addition, some anti-drys demand that 4 per cent beer be voted instead of 2.75 per cent by weight, as proposed in the O'Connor-Hull bill before the House last session.

Differences also have developed over the federal tax to be placed on beer. In the O'Connor-Hull beer bill, the tax was fixed at 3 cents a pint and estimated to produce $500,000,000 a year revenue. Objection has been made this tax is too high.

Cooperage manufacturers are demanding Congress modify the Volstead act so draught beer can be sold. They declare the workman will not be satisfied unless he can purchase a glass of beer instead of a bottle.

O'CONNOR AWAITED

Plans for the pre-session conferences were to be speeded with arrival of Representative John J. O'Connor (Dem.), of New York, who is expected to head the Democratic beer proponents during the short session.

Further evidence that Southern Democrats will support the modification program was offered today.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Dem.), of Arizona, regarded as an uncompromising dry, declared Democrats must make good on their platform pledge. He said:

"Honesty and good faith require that platform pledges be kept. The Democrats would make themselves 'embezzlers of power' if they refuse to live up to their own political platform promises."

Representative Collier (Dem.), of Mississippi, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he would support the party platform, as did Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, a Democratic House power.

DAVIS FACES CONTEST

Washington and later ones in Philadelphia. He said the relations between large industrial corporations and their employes as regards elections could be investigated in Washington. Sessions would be held in Philadelphia, he believed, to hear the 2,000 complaints of irregularities of which Wilson said he knew.

'Certificate of Doubt' To Davis Forecast

HARRISBURG, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Political observers at the Capitol today were predicting that Gov. Pinchot would duplicate his action of 1926 by issuing a certificate with qualifications in the re-election of Senator James J. Davis to the United States Senate.

In 1926, the Governor, then completing his first term, sent a "certificate of doubt" to the Senate in the election of William S. Vare. The Governor said that the election "was partly bought and partly stolen" and that Vare appeared to have been elected. The Senate subsequently refused to seat Vare.

The Governor demanded last fall that the Republican state committee withdraw Davis because of the charge against him of participating in an alleged illegal lottery. He indicated then that if Davis were elected he would be forced to issue a certificate of doubt.

Which Shall It Be? -:- -:- By QUIN HALL

FRANCE USING DEBT AS SNARE

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, Jr.
(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Europe's drive to induce the United States to grant a new war debt moratorium and reconsider the whole question of debts is only the opening phase of a tremendous offensive designed to maneuver America into "playing its full part in world affairs."

This was obvious as the old world awaited from Washington the word which is expected to end debt payments—for no one in France believes that the payments suspended by the Hoover moratorium will ever be resumed.

What Europe wants—and expects to get—from Washington may be summarized as follows:

1—Linking the United States in a world "security scheme" as stressed today by the new French disarmament plan with reference to Secretary of State Stimson's declaration that there can be no neutral nations in future wars.

2—Abandonment of its present tariff policy by the United States to provide a greater market for Europe's more cheaply produced manufactures and products.

3—Full participation by the United States in a new world economic organization growing out of the projected world economic conference which, as Le Temps states semi-officially, "will not succeed without previous or parallel settlement of inter-governmental debts."

To quote again, the authoritative Le Temps concludes:

"There are now involved general interests so essential for the return of confidence and prosperity that the Americans also will courageously accept their responsibilities."

Discussing the proposed conference of President-elect Roosevelt with President Hoover on debts, Leon Bailby, publisher of L'Intransigeant, points out that Roosevelt can say to Hoover:

"It is you who, by your imprudent moratorium, opened the door to cancellation of all war debts.

"It is you who will have to work out the problem to its end. I will not get mixed up in the matter."

The Journel Des Debats, emphasizing the permanence of the prospective moratorium, states:

"Suppression of reparations means inevitably suppression of debts. It is extraordinary that Americans did not take this into account when on their own initiative they sought to put on others the whole burden of financial charges of the war.

"The Lausanne accord, which is the fruit of their policy, obviously will be ratified only if they make the very sacrifice they asked of their ancient European associates."

The Paris Midi concludes a long expose of the debts problem and America's inevitable involvement in further European complications, with:

"The cleverness of the British and French notes consists in obliging America to abandon the policy of falling back upon herself."

PROBE OF GAS FIRM ENDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Federal Trade Commission today completed its investigation of the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company of Pittsburgh, a powerful subsidiary of the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation holding system.

Following a detailed explanation of the operating services, advertising methods and legal expenses of the Pittsburgh group, Robert J. Reider, examiner of the commission, showed that in 1930 this group of gas utilities served 151 cities and towns and 156,653 customers in the Pittsburgh area.

After the remaining groups of the Columbia system have been subjected to formal hearings before the commission, an exhaustive report will be submitted to Congress for any action which that body may see fit to take.

ROBERTS TALKS AT VOTE TRIAL

David Roberts, former assistant custodian of county property and Fifth Ward political leader, taking the stand in his own defense, today denied buying any poll tax receipts for the primary election, September, 1931.

He is on trial charged with violating the election laws in wholesale purchase of such receipts.

Roberts testified his name had been stamped on orders for tax receipts by a fellow clerk in the property custodian's office, Lawrence Feinert.

Feinert testified he had been informed by Arthur Drumm, tax clerk in the County Treasurer's office, that it would facilitate issuing of tax receipts if the orders were all signed in one name. Consequently, Feinert said, he used the stamp bearing Roberts' name, which was generally used for payrolls.

BELGIUM JOINS IN REQUESTING DEBT DELAY

Nation Follows Lead Of Britain and France

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Belgium officially joined Great Britain and France today in a formal request to the United States for postponement of her debt installment due on December 15.

The Belgian ambassador called upon Secretary of State Stimson in the latter's office and presented a note from his government asking for the postponement.

In doing so Belgium executed her part of the "Gentlemen's Agreement" drawn at the Lausanne reparations conference last summer in which Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy agreed to maintain a solid front against the United States on all negotiations for reduction or cancellation of the war debts.

TO PUBLISH TEXT

The text of the Belgian note, understood to be similar to the French and British notes, will be made public by the State Department Wednesday morning.

The next diplomatic caller expected at the State Department in connection with the war debts is the Polish Ambassador. It was reported here that the Polish government had transmitted a formal note to the Ambassador for presentation to Stimson within the next day or two.

Nothing to date has been heard from the Italian government whose debt installment due on December 15, is just under $1,250,000.

PRIVATE DEBTS

Meanwhile, the belief that private debts would be the object of the next drive if the debtor nations obtain a revision or cancellation of their governmental obligations stiffened the opposition of congressional leaders to the European pleas.

Senator Bingham (Rep.), of Connecticut, sounded this view when he said:

"The only objective of these European nations is to bolster their credit so they can borrow more money."

Almost at the same time a high administration official at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue was saying:

"Many people do not realize yet that, whether we like it or not, the world is faced with the necessity for a downward revision of all debts, governmental and private debts alike."

This was an expression of a private viewpoint, but it also was very nearly the viewpoint taken by the administation.

Knowledge of Congress of this administration viewpoint has been partially responsible for congressional opposition even to discuss revision of the debts.

Sue Carol Seeks Baby For Friend to Adopt

SUE CAROL . . . . . TODAY SHE'S SELECTING A TINY BABY

Movie Star Places Ad in Paper in Quest for Child

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(INS.)—New York will see something brand new today—a "baby audition."

Sue Carol, movie star, will select a baby for adoption for an unnamed friend.

Sue and her husband, Nick Stuart, also of the films, are the parents of a four-months-old daughter, and this is one of the reasons why her friend asked her to select a child to adopt.

Mrs. Stuart, with the big brown eyes and the velvet voice, tremulous with the excitement of her responsibility, today gave International News Service a copy of the advertisement she is inserting in the "personal columns" of newspapers. It read:

"Wanted: For adoption, baby, preferably girl, between ages of six and 18 months. Must be in perfect health. Can guarantee exceptionally good home, best of care and definite provision for future.

"Am acting as intermediary for friend. Apply 2:30 to 4 p. m., Tuesday and Thursday. Sue Carol, Essex House, 160 Central Park, South."

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, President-elect, is going to the White House, probably a week from today, to confer with President Hoover on international debts, but he has no intention of shouldering responsibility for any decisions with respect to debt revision or extension of the moratorium that are reached prior to his inauguration on March 4.

That responsibility, Mr. Roosevelt declared in his telegram accepting the President's invitation, rests squarely on the shoulders of Mr. Hoover and the present Congress.

PARLEY WITH LEADERS

After expressing the hope that President Hoover also would confer with the Democratic leaders of Congress on the debt question, Mr Roosevelt said:

"In the last analysis the immediate question raised by the British, French and other notes created a responsibility which rests upon those now vested with executive and legislative authority."

At the same time Gov. Roosevelt assured President Hoover of his co-operation "in every appropriate way," not only on the debt question but "in all matters relating the welfare of the country."

In his telegram to President Hoover accepting the invitation t confer at the White House, Gov Roosevelt wrote:

"I appreciate your cordial telegram. On the subjects to which you refer, as in all matters relating to the welfare of the country, I am glad to co-operate in every appropriate way, subject, of course, to the requirements of my present duties as Governor of this state

DATE INDEFINITE

"I shall be delighted to confer with you in Washington, but I have been confined to the house with a slight cold and I am, therefore, not able to suggest a definite date. I shall call you on the telephone as soon as the time of my departure for the South has been arranged.

"May I take the liberty of suggesting that we make this meeting wholly informal and personal. You and I can go over the entire situation.

"I have already arranged to meet a number of the Democratic leaders of the present Congress late this month at Warm Springs. It will be helpful to me to have your views and all pertinent information when I meet them.

"I hope that you also will see them at the earliest opportunity because, in the last analysis, the immediate question raised by the British, French and other notes creates a responsibility which rests upon those now vested with executive and legislative authority."

RECOUNT BEGUN IN TWO WARDS

A recount of all districts of the Second Ward and the Third and Fourth districts of the Ninth Ward has been begun by the returning board, because of alleged election irregularities.

It was the returns of the Second Ward that swung the election of George Metzler and W. J. Maloney, Republican candidates for Legislature, after unofficial returns from three other wards in the Second Legislative District had indicated John L. Friel and Joseph G. Brennan, Democrats, had been elected.

The 38 districts counted out of 42 districts gave Metzler, 7,597; Maloney, 7,424; Brennan, 7,027, and Friel, 6,769.

The four districts held up by the return board, the Fourth, of the Sixth Ward; Twelfth, of the Ninth Ward, and the Second and Seventh, of the Tenth Ward, as reported on the triplicate return sheets, brought the figures to:

Metzler, 8,266; Maloney, 8,064; Brennan, 7,774; Friel, 7,516.

Ballot boxes will be opened in these districts to correct clerical errors: Third District of the Twenty-first Ward, Fourth District of the Twenty-second Ward, Second and Seventh districts of the Tenth Ward and Second District of the Twelfth Ward.

couple now accused of the strange crime. The man, once a well-known concert player, had his hand mutilated and retired to "Goat Castle." A lady went with him as housekeeper.

For a long time a feud had existed between this elderly couple and the old lady found dead alone in her old house. A trifling quarrel about trespass started the feud.

A number of Negroes are accused of helping in the murder and the rifling of Miss Merrill's ancient house. The prosecutor says:

"I have plenty of evidence, plenty of bloody fingerprints."

"Goat Castle" has been "tidied up" and thousands of visitors pay admission at the gate. The secluded pianist, in spite of his mutilated hand, has been persuaded to give concerts, which have proved profitable because of public curiosity. All the neighborhood wonders why anybody should have shot "old Jennie Merrill."

TRANS-CONTINENTAL railroads running from the Atlantic to the Pacific will note the announcement in the Miami Herald that the Seaboard Air Line in a few days will run a train from New York to this city with only one night on the way.

Trains that make the trip to California take three nights going, four nights coming back. Every Californian will tell you:

"It is worth it, no matter how long it takes."

But the public ignorance must be considered.

Of course the flying machine will soon come, fool proof, accident-proof, weather-proof. Every trip within the borders of the United States will be made by daylight of the same day, and an hour or two won't make much difference.

Administration to Back General Sales Tax

By FULTON LEWIS
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Strong likelihood that the administration will back a general manufacturers' sales tax in the December session of Congress was seen today, as the Franco-British appeals for a new debt moratorium further complicated the Treasury's budget problems.

With the debt situation high in the air, and certain to remain so at least until the opening of Congress, it appeared that the President will have to present alternate budgets to Congress, one based on the supposition that the moratorium will be granted, the other on the supposition that it will not.

In the former proposition, the sales tax appears inevitable, as the only way out.

If Europe fails to pay, or is granted a moratorium on the $124,000,000 due the United States December 15, the potential revenues as listed in the budget will be cut by exactly that amount, and will have to be made up by new taxes.

It is known Secretary Mills is still strongly in favor of the sales tax. Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, close adviser of the administration last week declared its adoption by the December Congress inevitable.

PARADING CHALFANT STUDENTS WIN DISPUTE OVER TUITION

TURTLE CREEK UNION'S DOORS REOPENED

Woman Leader Scores Board for Failure To Pay Charges

Parading high school pupils of Chalfant Borough, barred from Union High School, Turtle Creek, because of the failure of the Chalfant School Board to pay their tuition and sign a contract for future payments, returned to classes today.

At a protest meeting of more than 100 citizens last night in the Chalfant School, Sperintendent of County Schools Dr. C. E. Dickey told them to send their children back to Union High today and that some arrangement will be made. He said:

"Some satisfactory agreement will have to be made between the two school boards. The children cannot be left holding the bag."

R. R. Schultz, president of the school board, did not attend the meeting. He explained:

"We do not have to sign any agreement and we are not going to. We owe about $2,000 and we are paying it as best we can.

"The school board wants the students to go to East Pittsburgh where facilities are much better and cheaper.

"All of our trouble has been caused by Mrs. Sara Long, who was fired as secretary of the board two years ago."

At last night's meeting Mrs. Long, who called the protest meeting, said:

"Where is our board president? If he had any backbone he would be here."

While the meeting was in progress, the 54 students who were barred yesterday voiced their opinions outside the building. Several cheers for Union were given, while one boy played "Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here" on his mouth organ, as the group paraded around the school building.

Cash K. Patterson, president of the Union board, said:

"We are going to allow the Chalfant students to attend school today. However, if some agreement is not made soon they will be barred from attending classes."

FARMERS' DEFI ENDS MILK WAR

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The threat of a milk "famine" temporarily dispelled, residents of the greater Cincinnati area found the familiar bottle back on their doorstep when they awoke today.

A three-day strike of union milk wagon drivers, in which several of their substitutes were beaten, wagons overturned, deliveries suspended and police swamped with calls for assistance, ended last night with dealers and drivers agreeing to arbitrate a proposed 20 per cent reduction.

The strike ended as farmer-producers of Southern Ohio, Northern Kentucky and Southeastern Indiana were gathering in a mass meeting to consider cutting off the milk supply until the dealers and drivers came to terms. The farmers hailed the agreement to arbitrate as a great moral victory for the producers and claimed credit for it.

SNOW, COLDER FORECAST HERE

Balmy weather today, with the mercury around 60, was to give way to rain, snow and much colder tomorrow, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted.

Sub-zero temperatures were reported for the first time this season in the far Northwest. Western Ohio is expecting a drop to 15 degrees by tomorrow night. The cold wave will not reach that mark here, however, and likely will drift eastward over the Great Lakes, the weather experts asserted.

Tonight's low temperature will be between 35 and 40, it was predicted.

PLOT TO KIDNAP ARCHITECT REVEALED

Writer of Threats to Frank Lloyd Wright Being Sought

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—A plot to kidnap Frank Lloyd Wright, internationally famous architect, was disclosed today with the information that Madison police were seeking the author of a threatening letter delivered to Wright at his home near Spring Green on November 5.

Several students at the new school which Wright established at his home, Taliesin, near Spring Green, were said to have been maintaining an armed guard since the note was delivered.

Wright was in New York. He will return this week-end. A friend said Wright would be accompanied by a personal bodyguard.

The kidnap note demanded that a sum of money be deposited at an appointed place and declared that the architect would be abducted and held for ransom if he failed to comply. The instructions in the note were ignored.

BRIDEGROOM, 70, SLAIN

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Nov. 15.—(INS.)—Two men were taken into custody today for questioning in a bizarre murder mystery drama in which the principals included a 70-year-old bridegroom, his 50-year-old bride, the latter's crippled son and the two men who were questioned.

The crippled youth is Clement Kiesel, 27, who told police he found his mother, bound with rope, lying by the side of his murdered stepfather, Jacob Stank, 70, in the couple's bedroom.

Stank's head had been crushed in by heavy blows. State troopers said they found pieces of rope and a five-pound hammer wrapped in a newspaper outside the home. Stank and his wife had been married only seven months.

The crippled son told police that he had been imprisoned in a locked room by one of the assailants. On hands and knees, he said, he crawled to the door which he pried open with a screwdriver, obtained a knife and loosed his mother's bonds. The slayers had fled.

Mrs. Stank said she thought the men were in search of money. They ransacked the bedroom, she said, and fled empty-handed.

IRENE DUNNE . . . SICKNESS, NOT DIVORCE SENT HER FLYING

Movie Star Consoles Husband in Hospital

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(INS.)—Irene Dunne's swift passage across the country, far from being for the purpose of arranging a divorce, served to knit more closely the marriage bonds between her and Dr. Francis Griffin.

The movie actress was very definite about this today as she sat in St. Vincent's Hospital, where her husband is slowly recovering from an emergency operation. She said:

"I'm terribly distressed over this divorce rumor. I came here only to be with my husband, who is sick, who needed me.

"I didn't say anything about my reason for coming, because I didn't want this to look like a publicity stunt. I suppose I made a mistake, though, in keeping it quiet."

PRINCESS DARES SMOKING BAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Princess Esma, great-granddaughter of the late Sultan Abd-El-Kader, of Algeria, sipped tea between puffs of her cigaret on the stool of a drug store breakfast counter today.

Someone asked if the Princess were allowed to smoke at college. She is a student at Rockford College, and had come here to speak on "Women of the Orient" at a woman's club.

She said:

"Of course they prohibit women from smoking at the college, but I do what I want. And I smoke—yes, right in the homes of my professors. All the girls do, but most of them slip off to a store near the campus to do their smoking. I do not believe in hypocrisy."

Battle's Over, So Let's All Bury the Hatchet--In Someone

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Now that Hoover and Roosevelt are scratching each other's backs we also want to clip out a row of paper dolls.

If two presidents can do some political necking us little turnips can also apologize.

Therefore, and notwithstanding, we apologize for saying that Ben Turpin got that way from looking for prosperity around the corner.

Ben was that way before the campaign. The only reservation we make in this apology is that the campaign didn't do Ben any good.

We are sorry that we called the Republican orators a mob of hogcallers. Our better judgment tells us they were an octave too low.

If it's not too late we also want to doff the contrite hat to Dolly and Alice. If we can't be the same old sweethearts, let's be the same old friends.

We ain't forgetting that Alice has a fifth cousin in the White House. And while you can forget a fifth cousin on December 25 you can't on March 4.

Girl Prodigy Plays To Win U. S. Entry

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Poldi Milliner, prodigy pianist from Vienna, won swift entry into the United States by tickling the ivories in such masterful fashion that she charmed customs men.

The 17-year-old girl, arriving yesterday to fill engagements from coast to coast, was sent to Ellis Island on a technicality. The customs men said she must be properly identified before she could come in for a six months' stay without bond.

LIBBY HOLMAN GOES FREE

URGED BY REYNOLDS

Solicitor Higgins' action in dropping the charges followed the expressed desires of young Reynolds' blood relatives.

W. N. Reynolds wrote the prosecuting officer a month ago saying the family would be "quite happy" to see the case dropped.

Charges of "willful and premeditated" murder were preferred against the 26-year-old widow and her co-defendant in an indictment voted August 4 by the Forsyth County grand jury.

Young Walker was arrested at once. Mrs. Holman submitted to arrest near the little county seat town of Wentworth in Rockingham County, and was released in $25,000 bond.

Through her attorneys, she asserted she wanted a trial and "vindication" at the earliest possible moment, preferably before the birth of her expected child, which, she said, was expected early next year.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds' sister said today that the nolle prossing of murder charges against Smith Reynolds' widow was only what her family had expected. Mrs. Myron Kahn said:

"I am not surprised at the court action. We all expected it.'

So much had the step been anticipated, she said, that Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Holman, the widow's parents, had gone east to talk over the next move with their daughter. Mrs. Kahn said she did not know just where they were.

Reminded that Mrs. Reynolds once said she would demand trial and vindication under the indictmetn charging her with murder of her husband, Mrs. Kahn said:

"I know Libby did say that. Whether she has changed her mind is what I do not know just now."

She added, however, she felt perhaps the widow had decided against the notoriety of a trial.

Mrs. Reynolds now is concerned only with her child, expected to be born in January or February, Mrs. Kahn said.

MARQUIS BLIND, WIFE DIRECTS PREMIERE

'The Dark Hours' Wins Acclaim, But Calls for Author Go Unheeded

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—They shouted for the author at the gala opening of the modern biblical play, "The Dark Hours."

But the author wasn't there.

"The Dark Hours." A grim coincidence.

Don Marquis, America's famous humorist who had written a serious play over which he had dreamed and worked most of his career, was home—blind.

His physician said he must not go to the opening. The excitement would not be good for him.

CRITICS GENEROUS

So Don Marquis tossed on his bed and peered into the unknown until the newspapers came today and they read him the notices of the dramatic critics. They were good notices.

He was very tired but he could not sleep until they came.

What did he think about? Marquis said:

"Sometimes I saw lights before my eyes, cubistic shapes, sparkles like the sparklers kids use on the Fourth of July. There was a policeman with a club in the room all night. I guess I must have been awfully excited."

He sank every cent he owned in the production of the play.

Marquis' eyes went back on him because of overwork in connection with the casting and directing of his play. His actress-wife, Marjorie Marquis, is handling it now.

BLIND TWO WEEKS

It has been two weeks since the light went out for him. However, there has been some improvement and the doctors say he will eventually recover his sight. The author said:

"I need my eyes to make a living."

Don Marquis, at 54, has a shock of white hair and a face as kind as his heart. He was dressed in a dark red robe over his pajamas and sat on the edge of a cot. The upper room of his house was softly-shaded.

A nurse hovered near. His chum, Pete, a friendly bull pup, snuggled at his feet. Marquis was finishing one of his quaint stories about Archy the cockroach. He wrote unseeingly in large longhand. His secretary brought back the typed pages from his copy and read it to him.

ARCHY AND HIS FLEA

The story was Archy discoursing about a flea who boasted to him about biting a lion and Archy pointed out that he need not be so proud as the lion probably didn't notice him but only thought it was the measles.

Don Marquis came back to his play. He had written it as a book eight years ago. The movies had wanted to do it, but he had turned them down. He did not want anybody to change a word. He said:

"I have tried to put beauty into it and yet keep it moving fast. I tried to make the tragic biblical story fit into Union square or any American city. I think perhaps in these hard times the nation is hungry for the spiritual. At least, the people who have suffered are learning to pay attention to things.

"If the play is a flop, I have no alibi. I know I did what I wanted to."

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Franklin Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover are members of the same Lancaster family. Mysterious 'Pied Piper' Lures Pedigreed Pups

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Chicago has a new kind of Pied Piper and he's a racketeer.

Everywhere he goes blue-blooded dogs are sure to follow, and that's because he has perfected some kind of dog food that proves irresistable.

He has left a trail of sad Jimmys, Bettys, and Tommys in his wake, because, once he has lured the pets away, they do not return.

Police believe he sells them at good prices at a kennel which, so far, they have been unable to locate.

The police say they have evidence that Chicago's Pied Piper of dogdom carriers his dog food in an outside coat pocket while he strolls through aristocratic neighborhoods. One whiff of the food and the dogs follow him to his automobile.

So far only the finest bred dogs have been reported missing.

'UNCLE DAVE' OLIVER SPRY AT MEETING

A breath of a world long since gone — when "Uncle Dave" Oliver, now 98, was a young gallant, swept into the conference room of the Board of Public Education late yesterday afternoon. "Uncle Dave," still fairly spry, brought it.

The re-organization meeting of the board he served many years was soon to start. When he appeared at the big doors—grey-whiskered, grey-haired, slightly stooped over, the members, their aides—all arose and applauded.

And Uncle Dave? He bowed low from the waist. And as if to show the manners of the old days and the agility that is still his—he bowed again—a little more sweeping than the first. He walked over to a chair, refusing the president's—which he held for a decade—sat down beside Dr. George W. Gerwig and sighed:

"I'm at home here."

Later, eulogized, he answered:

"It's more than a privilege; it is a pleasure to be on a board which as a public body has never been accused of wastage, of loss of money or abuse of any of the conditions that arise in handling public funds.

"We've always been straight; that's what we are. Everything done has been straight—straight and good, all wool and a yard wide."

FIND TURFMAN SHOT IN HOME

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—William R. Midgley, 55, suspended trainer of thoroughbreds and owner of a small racing stable, was found shot to death in his home here today.

His wife told police she heard the report of a gun and ran to the bathroom, where she found him with a bullet through his heart.

Just before the shooting two men had been arrested on charges of robbing him of a stop watch, valued at $175. Police were trying to link the loss with his death.

His license was revoked after a race in which Portam, an Eisenhardt entry, was sent to the post at Empire City in what was said to be an unfit racing condition.

Misses Call to Work, Camp Cook Ends Life

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Haunted by the fear of losing his job as a railroad train cook, Emmett Weese, 48, shot himself to death after the call boy failed to rouse him at the usual hour.

Weese, who had been in ill health, suffered a broken arm some time ago, which hampered him in his work. Police say the constant thought that he might be discharged caused him to grow despondent.

COUNT, 'BROKE,' DENIED ENTRY

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(INS.)—Count Hughes de Borchgrave D'Altena, of Ghent, Belgium, a tall blond youth whose mother was an American, went to Ellis Island today instead of visiting his great-uncle in Philadelphia.

The count, whose passport was in order, was barred from landing because the pockets of his well-tailored trousers were not lined with cash.

With him went Samuel Schwimmer, 25-year-old Czechoslovakian, who had stowed away in the baggage room of the Westernland, the ship on which Count D'Altena was a passenger.

The count, annoyed at first when his disembarkment was delayed, soon accepted his plight good naturedly. His mother, who was Ruth Snyder, of Philadelphia, lives in Belgium. The uncle he was visiting is known to be well-to-do. But it was no go for the low-funded count, just the same.

HEART ATTACKS FATAL TO 7

Seven residents of Allegheny County were dead today, all victims of heart attacks within a 24-hour period, according to morgue reports.

Among the dead was Harry F. Woernley, 50, of 1328 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, executive of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company, who died after being stricken in a Wilkinsburg restaurant.

Mrs. Susan Duncan, 52, of 3512 Mayfair street, McKeesport, died in a McKeesport street car while en route to a lodge meeting in Wilmerding.

The others were: Miss Emma G. Donaldson, 72, of 1300 Veto street; Joseph Susskey, 50, of 1402 Bouquet street, McKeesport; Mrs. Anna Sinka, 47, of 121 Butler street, McKeesport; Joseph Ruttenberg, 50, of 1525 Locust street, and Frank Edwards, 57, of Cathedral Mansions.

Citizens' Bus Line Approval Given

The proposed organization was approved by the Wilkinsburg Council last night after an address by C. V. Shoup, executive director.

Police Seek Trio In Store Holdup

A bandit trio, led by a youth, was being sought by police today following the holdup of the Shadyside Pharmacy, Inc., 5213 Fifth avenue. The youthful leader, described as "pox marked," and his companions, escaped with $75, after having forced J. M. George, president of the firm, and two other employes into a rear room.

One hundred gasoline and oil service station representatives of the Pittsburgh district were guests of the Freedom Oil Works Company last night at a dinner-smoker in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Talks of salesmanship were given by George Hall, Dean Berry, H. G. Duey and A. L. Rich who stressed new methods in business.

Edgar Wallace's Daughter Hears Jail Threat

LONDON, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Miss Patricia Wallace, daughter of Edgar Wallace, noted novelist, got into difficulty about a dressmaker's bill. A judge told her she must spend 10 days in jail if she does not pay up the £54 bill at the rate of £2 a month.

Wallace, thrill wizard, made a fortune during his lifetime, but when he died his family found he had left them almost penniless. Patricia, accustomed to wealth, went to work for £5 a week. The judge was informed she had bargained to spend 60 per cent of her income for apartment rent.

ROBINS MURDER STORY DOUBTED

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Police and federal agents are a bit skeptical of the story they got second-handed that Col. Raymond Robins, prohibition leader and friend of President Hoover, has been killed by New Jersey gangsters.

Carlisle O. Byrd, oil and mining promoter, passed the story on to Boston police as coming from Ralph J. Code, of the Dorchester district, who is being held in $10,000 after pleading not guilty to larceny charges.

According to Byrd, Code told him that Robins, who disappeared early last September, was thrown into the sea 40 miles off Montauk Point, L. I., after rum runners had kidnaped him and taken him to an unnamed New Jersey beer baron. Code denied telling the story.

League to Demand Legislature Cut Tax

SHARON, Pa., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Thomas Rawlings, of Blairsville, president of the Tax Justice League, last night told an audience of the league's plan for a "great demonstration" before the Legislature in January for tax reduction. He said "thousands will invade Harrisburg demanding tax relief."

Among the legislation the league is seeking is a law limiting school board levies on real estate to four mills, Rawlings said.

Rosenwald Claim Of $5,059,300 Filed

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Attorneys for the Museum of Science and Industry have filed a claim with Probate Clerk Michael C. Robin for $5,059,300 against the estate of the late Julius Rosenwald, philanthropist.

The money, they said, represented the amount Rosenwald, founder of the museum, promised to pay to guarantee its completion. Lessing J. Rosenwald, a son, and one of the executors of the estate, consented to permit the claim allowed.

Greensburg Vet Sues Government

Merril D. Grim, 201 Eicher avenue, Greensburg, a World War veteran, has filed suit in Federal Court against the government to recover on a $10,000 war risk insurance policy.

He declares he became ill at Camp Lee, Virginia, and his condition was aggravated by his being removed from a camp hospital to make room for influenza sufferers.

BOY HOMESICK FOR CHINA HELD

A frightened Chinese boy, Jack Yee, 16, in Morals Court today told Magistrate Thomas D. Jones of his longing for his native land and his parents. He was charged with being a runaway and was turned over to immigration authorities for investigation.

Arrested after police say he had loitered for several days in an East North avenue lumber yard, the boy refused to eat.

Today he said he lived with a cousin, George Yee, at 307 Federal street. He said he had been a pupil in the Latimer Junior High School for three months, and was brought here two years ago by his father who had since returned to China.

'33 SCHOOL TAX RATE SAME

The Board of Public Education last night set the millage for 1933 school taxes at 11.75 mills—the same as that for 1932.

Failures to reduce the levy was attributed by the finance committee to the increasing delinquency of taxes. The committee estimated in its report that collections next year would be 75 per cent, where from 1916 to 1929 the average collection each year was 92 per cent.

J. R. Brady, of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, and J. W. Bamford, of the Buildings Owners' and Managers' Association, attended the meeting and expressed their disappointment at the failure to cut the tax rate. They had previously demanded heavy economies.

Marcus Aaron, re-elected president, explained that the estimate of appropriations for 1933 had been cut $1,568,000 below the appropriations for the current year. The budget for 1933 is $13,735,110.

Prowler Escapes Through Window

A Negro prowler discovered early today in the home of H. L. Myers, 2211 Beechwood boulevard, jumped from a second floor window to the driveway and escaped.

Police said the prowler, who had gained entry through the kitchen, had made his way to the second floor, where he heard the occupants of the house call police. Nothing was taken.

Whipping Penalties Urged for Economy

Struck With Shovel, Injury Kills Victim

Vicious Lions Sought For Second 'Safari'

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Denver M. Wright, St. Louis manufacturer, whose recent pseudo-African "Safari" turned out to be merely a Missouri fiasco, so far as he was concerned, still has lion-hunting ambitions.

Wright said today he was considering purchasing two more lions and starting his big-game hunt all over again. His much-publicized synthetic lion hunt in southeast Missouri last month came to a tame ending when a deputy sheriff killed the two young circus lionesses Wright had intended for his quarry, and which he had released on a small island in the Mississippi River.

Despite the outcome of his first "Safari," which brought protests from members of humane societies, and warnings from state and county officers, Wright insists there's "nothing wrong with the idea." He's still bitter over the spoiling of his first hunt, and also displeased by the great number of letters he received in which the writers accused him of poor sportsmanship. Wright said:

"You won't be able to call the lions 'young and kittenish,' next time. If I do it again, I'll get a couple of old, vicious ones. I'm the sort of a fellow that likes to do a thing, once he sets his mind to it."

MISSION AIMS HELD LIMITED

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Total conversion of Asia to Christian membership was held to be an improper objective for foreign missions in the report of the Appraisal Commission of the Laymen's Foreign Mission Inquiry today.

The commission issued the twenty-first installment of its report, in which it urged preparation for the transition of foreign missions from temporary to permanent functions. The full report is to be delivered next Friday before 300 mission board officials of the seven Protestant denominations participating in the inquiry.

Today's installment said that the moment of transition to permanency in function is near in Japan and more remote in China and India. The report said:

"If the object of the mission were to be conceived in terms of a total conversion of Asia to Christian membership, the achievement would be indefinitely remote. In our belief, such an objective is an improper one for any foreign group. The 'foreign' mission must regard as its task the planting of a seed, not the final growth of a tree."

RABBI PREDICTS WAR IN EUROPE

Rabbi James G. Heller, of Cincinnati, speaking in Rodef Shalom Temple last night, declared another European war in five years is inevitable, and added that all the present instruments of peace, including the World Court, the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact are too feeble to prevent it.

His picture of European conditions gained after a recent tour was gloomy:

"Young men in Europe openly say that they would prefer the excitement of war to the starvation and uncertainties of peace."

The rabbi declared intense hatred exists between Italy and France, with Italians insisting economic factors increase the feeling between the two countries. England likewise is unfriendly toward France, he declared.

Broken Hearts Aren't Healed By Cash Settlements

Do you believe in breach of promise suits?

Has a girl a right to sue a man for "heart balm" if he discovers their engagement is a mistake and wants to call it off?

If so—why so?

Is the man to blame if a romance doesn't "take?"

Or can money mend a broken heart?

And if you found yourself in a predicament like that, what would you do—break with her and take your chances, or let yourself be threatened into marrying her?

That's what George wants to know.

THREATENED BY GIRL

"Dear Sally:

Will you please try to help me? I am in a tight pinch, and don't know what to do.

"I have had little education, but I have worked hard, and by that and saving, have managed to go into the garage business for myself.

"Meanwhile, I got engaged to a girl I thought I was in love with. I have treated her kindly and fairly, but a few months ago I began to realize that our engagement was a mistake; that I didn't love her as a man should love the woman he marries.

"So I asked to be released, and tried to explain to her. I told her I was terribly sorry about it all, and asked for her understanding of the way I felt. But it only made her angry.

"She not only refused to release me from our engagement, but threatened to sue me for what little money I have and have worked so hard to get.

"I had never thought much about 'breach of promise' laws, up to then, but now that I am confronted with this situation, it seems to me that they are very unfair. I honestly thought, when I asked her to marry me, that I loved her. I am trying to be honest now.

A BAD LAW

"Hasn't a man a right to change his mind? Women do it. Girls break their engagements, and no one thinks of suing them. Isn't it better to break with someone you have found you don't love than it is to go on?

"I have tried to tell her that, but she can't see it, and so is threatening me. Has she a right to take my money away from me because I have discovered that I don't love her as I thought I did? What shall I do? "GEORGE."

What shall you do?

Break with her, son. Any man or woman has a right to break off a mistaken engagement. In fact, it is the only fair and decent thing to do. No marriage made from a sense of "duty" can ever be happy, for either the partner who has fallen out of love or the one who insists on clinging. An engagement isn't a life sentence. It is a sort of tryout of companionship.

And the law that allows a woman to sue a man because he breaks an unsuccessful engagement is a bad law, and no woman who is worth her salt will invoke it.

The breach-of-promise law is no compliment to women. It was made in the days when women were supposed to be nitwits, incapable of possessing or using regular brains. But we now realize that women are people, as able to make their own decisions and protect their own interests as men.

It is an insulting farce to have a breach-of-promise law on the same statutes which grant women suffrage.

FACE EQUAL RISKS

If women are really the equals of men, they are able to face equal risks and assume responsibilities, in and out of marriage.

But suppose a wicked man has taken advantage of some trusting woman during their engagement.

The man is doubtless a scoundrel, but if she disregards the protection which marriage affords, and risks the perils of "free love," then she is as responsible as the man, and has betrayed herself as much as he has betrayed her.

And as for cash compensation, no cash could compensate a decent woman for the heartbreak of such an experience. And any woman who is brazen enough to air her shame, in order to get cash, is unworthy of respect.

I don't know whether this sordid situation lies behind your problem or not, George. If it does, my opinion of you is none too savory. But be that as it may, if you don't love her, you should leave her, regardless of her threats. No marriage that is founded on sobs or threats can ever succeed.

Fay King Clearing Up Reading for Advent of the New Year

By FAY KING

Now is the time to go into training for the new year which will be here before we realize it.

One of my main faults is accumulating magazines and newspapers which I just cannot discard until I have read in them what I have saved them to read.

By this time of each year I am dwelling in a valley surrounded by Alpine heights of this collection which threatens to come down on me any minute in an avalanche.

So I have gone into my annual retirement to read and rid myself of all this by the new year.

My little log cabin incense burner is a great help. I keep it in view as my prospective home and must discard down to its dimensions.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Marion and Carolyn Were Kidnaped, Note Shows

"Whoever is back of this thing has brains and audacity, plus," Harry Underwood said, as with silent unanimity we turned to him for the explanation of the crashing glass in the hall.

"Two men, at least, came to the side gates in an automobile," he said. "There must have been two, for Dicky heard one say, 'They're quicker,' as the car door closed and the car, already running leaped forward. Dicky almost got within shooting range, but not quite. Of course they meant that we were quicker than they thought."

"Oh!" Lillian moaned. "Suppose you had shot, and the girls had been in the car!"

"That's why I didn't shoot," Dicky said quietly. "The thought of that, I mean."

"But they weren't in the car," Harry supplemented quickly, for the ashen look in Lillian's face had deepened.

"How do you know?" What does that paper say?" she demanded, evidently at the limit of her endurance.

"I'll read it to you," her husband said, unclosing his big hand and showing the paper crushed beneath it. He smoothed it out and read quickly but distinctly.

GIRLS SAFE

"The girls are safe—will be, as long as you do not communicate with police. They have a woman looking after them, have decent food, warmth, and clean, comfortable beds. It rests with yourselves whether this treatment continues. If both sets of parents have arrived by 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, put a large white cloth, like a flag, upon the top of your flagpole. Keep it there one-half hour, no longer, or the pupils will notice it. For your best interests and ours, keep this occurrence from the knowledge of your pupils. Be on the lookout tomorrow for further messages. You will not know how they come, but they will reach you."

"Is that all?"

He sprang to her side and Dicky answered:

"Yes, Lil; there is no signature."

"Kidnaped! I was afraid of it!"

Then she straightened herself and held out her hand imperiously.

"Let me see it!" she said, and when Harry had put it into her hand, she studied it carefully.

"This has been written by a man who usually writes with his right hand, but who has trained his left hand in an entirely different style of chirography for an emergency," she said. "We are dealing with an unusually clever man. Oh, Harry! What do you suppose they want? Money, I suppose. Do you suppose we can raise enough?"

"Dearest!"—her husband's arms were around her—"We will do everything humanly possible, and then add something. The Brixtons have resources, also."

HABITS KNOWN

"Whatever we have is at your service," Dicky said, and I nodded. I could not speak, for ever since the message from the kidnapers had been read, I had been weak with the crystallization of a fear that first came to me with the telephone message saying the girls were missing. If it needed further confirmation, I received it in the next minute.

"Of one thing I am sure," Dr. Barnes said slowly. "Someone concerned in this knows the habits of this school."

We all turned startled faces to him, and he explained.

"The time they have named for the display of that white flag is the one period of the day in which no pupil could be out of the building and none could notice the flagpole."

I rose unsteadily.

"I am so sorry, but I wonder if I could lie down for a minute or two," I said. "I am feeling a bit faint."

"Right in here," Mrs. Barnes said quickly, and I looked at Lillian beseechingly.

"Will you come with me?" I murmured, and my ruse to see her alone succeeded.

"Of course," she assented, but looked at her husband.

"There is nothing to do now but wait until daylight," he said. "When the Brixtons come, we will plan something. Why don't you and Mary lie down too?"

"Have Mary come, too," I whispered to Lillian, as we went out of the room with her supporting arm around me. But when we were in a roomy and comfortable guest suite and Mrs. Barnes had departed, I suddenly sat erect and Lillian gave a little cry.

"I thought that was it," she said hoarsely. "You know something you have been keeping from me. What is it?"

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Choice of an Opening Bid

No matter how closely we may agree upon general principles and upon systems of bidding, practically every player has his or her own personal idiosyncrasies. For instance, Mr. Culbertson firmly believes that when you have a choice of an Opening bid with a six-card length and a five-card length, the higher ranking of the two biddable suits should first be bid, and to this he permits no exceptions.

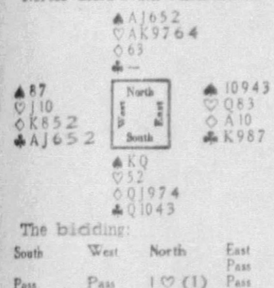
In this matter, my views are somewhat different. I believe that if the five-card suit is strong, it is well to consider the principle of rank in the choice of the order of bidding, but that proper consideration should be given to the question of Forces, which such unusual distributions make of paramount importance.

When a hand, for instance, is void of one suit, it is almost certain that, whether or not opponents have bid that suit, it will be opened against the final contract. Then it appears the additional trump in the six-card length must be of considerable importance.

In any event, regardless of who is right or wrong, an interesting example, which in this instance proved the superiority of the plan suggested above, occurred in a recent team-of-four match played by The Bridge World team against Crockford's. In the hand below, the value of the extra trump proved the difference between game and defeat.

East—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
			Pass
Pass	Pass	1 ♡ (1)	Pass
2 ◇ (2)	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♣ (3)	Pass
4 ♡ (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Realizing the possibility that the hand may be forced on the first lead.

2—Of course, the correct response.

3—Although North desires to play this hand at game, he wishes to show that he has a five-card spade suit and hence convey the further inference that he holds six hearts.

4—South realizes the inference of the three-spade bid, and knows the King and Queen of spades must fill out his partner's spade suit. Hence, even with two small hearts, he now goes to four hearts rather than to three notrump, which he knows must be dangerous.

In the play, four hearts, of course, were made against any defense. The Opening lead was a club, as East, with three hearts to the Queen, could see no advantage in the short suit lead of the Ace and one diamond. Naturally, North led the Ace and King of hearts, and when he dropped all except the Queen of hearts, his troubles were over.

The competing team played the hand at four spades, the bidding running as follows:

South	West	North	East
			Pass
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Against the four-spade contract the club was opened, and North was at once reduced to four trumps. Now his only hope of making the hand rested on the 3-3 break of the adversely held trumps. He led two rounds of hearts, trumping the third round with one of the honors in the Dummy hand, then a round of trumps was led, followed by a low club, which was ruffed, but when West failed to follow suit on the third round of trumps, his hope of making the hand vanished. The Force on the Opening lead had proved an insuperable barrier.

The theoretical objection to this type of bidding is that South will never be able to vision North's spade holding as a five-card suit. This is probably true, but it is perhaps questionable whether North desires South to consider his spade holding as being that strong, considering its extreme weakness.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Holding A Q J x in one suit, may the Knave be combined with a Queen in another suit to make ½ honor-trick?

Answer: Yes. However, if the holding were A K J x this could not be done, for the reason that 2 honor-tricks would already have been counted in the suit.

Bold but beautiful are the new striped gloves. One model of black kidskin has a petal cuff with bold stripes of red and black kid. It is sewn with red stitching to match the stripes.

A grand match with a velvet turban or toque is the velvet trimmed veil. One model has tiny discs of velvet pasted at the edges, while another model has a border of velvet flowers and leaves.

The smart set consists of a set of lovely accessories in velvet. Thus we have a Victorian capelet, a melon muff and gloves all of prune velvet. Another set uses a ruche instead of a capelet.

Nature Gives Warnings of Illness, Heed Them

Only recently I wrote on the subject of high blood pressure, but I cannot refrain from writing again about this common and often neglected ailment.

Dr. Copeland

For many persons suffering from high blood pressure ignore the warnings given them, and do not seek relief until it is too late to correct fully the damage it sometimes causes.

In most instances high blood pressure can be traced to changes in the heart and blood vessels. The blood vessels become brittle and firm and lose their elasticity, and these changes result in an obstruction to the flow of blood. This increases the pressure maintained by the pumping action of the heart.

Though high blood pressure is usually associated with such changes in the blood vessels, it may occur without them. Then the symptom may be due to excessive worry or excitement, faulty elimination or nervous fatigue.

Within recent years the significance of focal infection has been discovered, and this has contributed to our knowledge of high blood pressure. Now many cases can be traced to infected sinuses, tonsils, teeth, gallbladder or appendix, and when the source of infection is removed the blood pressure is lowered, and in many instances disappears permanently.

As I have said, the blood pressure is influenced by fear, excitement and other emotional experiences. For example, when a person enters a doctor's office for the first time he may be unduly alarmed or worried over what he may be told, and under such circumstances the pressure reading may be high.

If the blood pressure is taken after a strenuous day's work, or following severe exertion, misleading information is obtained. Most physicians insist upon taking the blood pressure upon at least two separate occasions, in order to make an accurate interpretation.

As we grow older our blood pressure increases. This is a normal change and it becomes dangerous only when the pressure increases rapidly and remains high.

Never compare your blood pressure with that of your friends. There are many factors that must be considered in the interpretation of high blood pressure in an individual case.

If you have been told that you have high blood pressure do not worry. If you follow the instructions and advice given by your physician you will come out all right.

But do not neglect high blood pressure, because it is by neglect that it becomes dangerous. If neglected, it may become a disabling condition.

Bear in mind always that in the beginning almost any ailment can be controlled, if not entirely removed. Nature is kindly. She gives early warnings. If you are wise, you will heed this warning.

Correct Manners

Gift to a Club

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have been president of a woman's club for the past three years and in about a month I will be retiring from office. Would a rosewood gavel be an appropriate gift to the club? It has been without one since organizing.

2—What shall I say upon retiring and presenting the gift to the club and new president? The meeting will also be the tenth anniversary of the club.

S.

1—The rosewood gavel would be the perfect gift for you to give to the club. I am sure that the members will be delighted that you thought of this gift.

2—Something like this might be appropriate to say: "I want so much to tell you today, at this last meeting of the club over which I have had the high privilege of being president for this year, what special pleasure I have had, what special happiness I have had, in this office of your president. In every minute of this time I have felt the perfect co-operation and friendship of every member of our club. For this I thank you with all my heart. To me it has been a memory-making year, and these memories will always be to me a most valuable treasure.

"As a modest symbol of this very happy year I would like to present to the club this gavel which I hope will stand always for my friendship, for my appreciation of your goodness to me, and for my wish that good fortune be with you always.

"And now I give this gavel to our new president Mrs. Allen, whom we welcome with the highest and deepest of friendship. Every felicitation to this good friend of ours, and every sweet greeting."

Note of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I visited a sister-in-law in another city. Several of her friends entertained for me. Some gave bridge parties, others had lunches.

I would like very much to thank these friends for their hospitality. Will you please tell me how to write a letter of appreciation?

READER.

And very polite and gracious it is for you to write such notes of thank-you for this nice hospatality. Perhaps something like this:

Dear Mrs. Waldron:

The memory of your lovely party for me while I was in New York City is such a treasure to me that I do want you to know how deeply I appreciate your thoughtfulness and your kind hospitality. Your bridge party was perfect . . . a perfect hostess, delightful friends, every gracious thoughtfulness for your guest. Thank you, with all my heart, for making this beautiful plan for my happiness.

I do hope that soon you will carry out your plan to come to Morristown so that I may have the pleasure of a visit with you. And it would give me such delight to have you come some afternoon to play bridge with some friends here in my home. You won't forget to let me know, will you?

Again my deep appreciation, Mrs. Waldron, and the anticipation of seeing you very soon.

Most sincerely yours,
Mary Wood Hutchinson.

ICE MAKERS SEE BEER AID

If beer is granted by Congress, the ice industry would be among manufacturers to benefit. This was the prediction of J. E. Muckermann, St. Louis, chairman of the national distribution department of the National Association of Ice Industries, which opened a four-day convention today in the William Penn Hotel.

Unable to predict what increased business could be expected, Muckermann said this would be entirely dependent upon the manner of distribution Congress would stipulate.

The convention session was formally called to order today by President E. L. Bennett, of Boston. The principal address was by F. J. Nichols, of Dayton. Business included reports and naming of committees.

A manufacturers' exhibit is among features of the convention. Outline of a national advertising plan and sales course program to be followed next year will be among important topics before delegates.

SALES REPORTS FOR TAX URGED

Passage by the Legislature in January of an act requiring a three-months return on sales, in accordance with the emergency sales tax act, would aid merchants in determining what is taxable before the law expires, February 28, Attorney S. Leo Ruslander, tax expert for Main & Co., told members of the Retail Credit Men's Association last night in the Fort Pitt Hotel. He said:

"Many tax questions will eventually have to be decided by the courts. If the 1 per cent sale tax produces more revenue than needed for emergency relief, the Legislature might want to retain it."

Ruslander contended the seller has the privilege of absorbing the tax or billing it to the consumer. He pointed out that a farmer who sells his own produce does not pay a tax, but if he sells it to another farmer the latter must keep a complete record and pay it. He continued:

"Dentists have raised the question as to whether false teeth are taxable, and have been informed that that must be decided. They contend theirs is a profession, and false teeth are not taxable."

A COLD PASSES THRU 3 STAGES!

It is Twice as Easily Stopped in the First as in the Second or Third Stages!

A cold passes through three stages—the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once it gets beyond the Dry Stage it is far more difficult to relieve. Therefore, treat a cold promptly.

The best thing you can take is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, because it does the four things necessary, in the way required. It opens the bowels. Kills the germs and fever in the system. Relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

This is the relief you want—complete, thorough and decisive! Trust to nothing less.

Effective as it is, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. No narcotics. No bad after-effects of any kind. Relief with comfort! The whole world knows Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine as the standard cold tablet. Comes in handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Get it at any drug store. There is nothing "just as good."

PUZZLES EXPLAINED

CIPHER NO. 10

By RALPH W. STEWART

25 15 21 10 3 9 12 20 5, 10 19 1 10 5 6 5 10
25 9 14 8 5? 10 5 19 8, 9 14 7 11 5? 5 12 21
12 8 20 5 7, 15 15 24 23 15 10 11! 8 20 5 16 5
8; 8 5 10 22 10 5 17 21, 5 14 3 25 8 1, 26 16 5
20 5 16 12 19 1 16 15 8.

This one's very, very easy. Bogie: 10 minutes.

All right, all right.

The answer to Cipher No. 9 (which so few of you fans solved) was:

"The only cipher you stumped me on yet was the biliteral cipher, for I do not recall ever seeing it before. Although I have not phoned you, I enjoy them. Here's to more and better ciphers. Corbett."

A little experimentation and the knowledge that the last seven letters in the code spelled "Corbett" should have enabled you, with the aid of yesterday's clues, to decipher this puzzle.

The method used was a pure alphabetical sequence in the table outlined yesterday, with the alphabet placed in the squares, normally neighboring letters being spaced three squares apart. Thus, your table, filled in, would read:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
1	a	h	o	v	b	i	p	w	c
5	j	q	x	d	k	r	y	e	l
9	s	z	f	m	t	g	n	u

Tricky . . . there was no letter for 96.

For the 10's of your cipher numbers, read horizontally on the table; for your digits, read vertically. Thus, 59 is the ninth letter in the second line.

Your letter frequency table merely made it easier for you. This cipher method is old and well-worn; it can be used in different manners with different spacings.

Your new code, Cipher Fans, you can credit to Ralph W. Stewart, of 2700 Broadway. It is very easy and shouldn't require any clues.

Stewart, by the way, solved Corbett's code in one hour, 45 minutes and like Corbett, was stumped on the biliteral code. The Grant cipher also stopped Stewart.

Henry Schaffer, of 227 Rothman street; Mrs. Ethel E. Burns, of 648 Center avenue, Avalon, boast of solving Cipher No. 9. Frank Balowitz, of 125 Watkins avenue, Wilmerding, submits a musical cipher that requires too much knowledge of music for the average cipher fan (and for the cipher editor).

Others working Cipher No. 9 included Robert W. Brown, 801 Union avenue, and Alan Abels, 15, 1717 Locust street; Elaine Detrick, 14, Trafford City, and Milton G. Lehman, Jr., of 5464 Darlington road, who complains because the Cipher Editor prints too many clues.

Man Called 'Hoover' Has Youths Jailed

Stronger than He Was at Twenty

FIFTY-FIVE years old, and still going strong!

Do you want the secret of such vitality? It isn't what you eat, or any tonic you take. It's something anyone can do—something you can start today and see results in a week! All you do is give your vital organs the right stimulant.

A famous doctor discovered the way to stimulate a sluggish system to new energy. It brings fresh vigor to every organ. Being a physician's prescription, it's quite harmless. Tell your druggist you want a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Get the benefit of its fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and that pure pepsin. Get that lazy liver to work, those stagnant bowels into action. Get rid of waste matter that is slow poison so long as it is permitted to remain in the system.

The new energy men and women feel before one bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin has been used up is proof of how much the system needs this help.

Get a bottle of this delicious syrup and let it end that constant worry about the condition of the bowels. Spare the children those bilious days that make them miserable. Save your household from the use of catharties which lead to chronic constipation. And guard against auto-intoxication as you grow older.

Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is such a well known preparation you can get it wherever drugs are sold and it isn't expensive.

—when you require a tonic

. . . when you feel "tired out" . . . "all run-down" . . . "sluggish" . . . "listless" . . . "no appetite"—it is then time to pause and consider what may be the cause of this condition. If you suspect an organic or functional trouble of a serious nature consult a physician at once.

But if your vital organs are sound and you have thru overwork, worry, unbalanced diet, working conditions, "bad air," lack of proper exercise, unconsciously reduced your vitality and resistance, then restore your vital red-blood-cells and their hemoglobin content so that your blood and tissues may have the oxygen to purify and strengthen your body.

For decades S.S.S. has been the preferred tonic for restoring hemoglobin to the red-cells of the blood. Start to rebuild now. You will surprise yourself. S.S.S. is on sale at all drug stores in two convenient sizes—the larger is more economical and is sufficient for a two weeks' treatment. © The S.S.S. Co.

End pimples, blackheads

—with quick-acting medicated cream

NO girl can be attractive to men if her skin is blemished. Why miss the admiration and good times that are your right?

There is a real scientific way to correct disfiguring skin faults. Ordinary creams and lotions won't do it. But Noxzema will! 6,000,000 women know it as the medical way to skin beauty.

This greaseless, white, medicated cream is much more than a face cream. It combines penetrating antiseptics that reach to the bottom of the pores and purge away all clogging, festering, poisonous matter—and soothing balms that heal, soften, refine the course, irritated skin surface.

For years Noxzema has been prescribed even in severe skin conditions. Nurses, seeing what wonders it worked, adopted Noxzema as their own beauty protector and recommended it to others. Try Noxzema yourself and see how much clearer, smoother, finer your skin can become while you sleep.

Apply Noxzema at bedtime, after removing make-up. (Greaseless—will not stain.) In the morning you will see natural, wholesome skin loveliness beginning to emerge—disfiguring pimples, blackheads, large pores, oiliness or other skin faults noticeably improved. Use Noxzema also before powdering and to make rough red, chapped hands soft and white.

RAGE UNBRIDLED

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the famous animal painter, Paul Bransom...inspired by the fierce battle between wild mustang stallions on the western ranges... fighting to the death with flashing teeth and slashing hoofs. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

Copr. 1932, The American Tobacco Co.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

FRANCE'S ARMS PLAN PLEASES GENEVA

GENEVA, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—French proposals for achieving disarmament and security, presented yesterday to the world disarmament conference bureau, have been generally received with a great deal of good will, but the comment is widely heard that the plan is tremendously complex.

The American delegation here appears well disposed toward the French system, especially because the Americans believe it affords a basis for meeting Germany's arms equality demand and getting Germany back into the disarmament conference.

GERMAN AWAITED

Resumption of that conference with all powers represented is considered an essential preliminary to the success of the disarmament undertaking. When Baron von Neurath, the German Foreign Minister, comes here for the League of Nations council meeting on Monday of next week, strenuous efforts will be made by representatives of the other great powers to reach some agreement on the issue of German equality.

The Italians have informally expressed a degree of skepticism over the feasibility of some of the French proposals, notably that for the creation of an international army under the control of the league, and that for the maintenance of war materials stocks under league control.

FORMIDABLE PROBLEMS

Among the Germans, and in other quarters also, there is a tendency to emphasize the formidable nature of several questions raised by the French plan, for example, the procedure which would be necessary for concluding the proposed continental security pacts, the difficulties of reorganizing national armies as proposed by France, and the questions involved in supervision and inspection of the special international troops and their equipment.

Up to now there has been no British comment, but Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary, is to speak at a conference bureau meeting tomorrow or Thursday.

The French disarmament plan would line up all nations, including the United States, under a pledge to abandon absolute neutrality in the event of war.

SHOE CONTRACT ASSAILED

Contracts for supplying shoes to needy school children of McKeesport, let by the Allegheny County Poor Board yesterday, were scored by Dr. J. B. Richey, superintendent of schools at McKeesport, who asserted a slightly higher priced shoe should have been bought.

Many of the shoes to be supplied 3,000 children of McKeesport will not last the winter, bidders declared.

Dr. Richey said an offer to keep the shoes in repair was refused by the board. The funds for half-soling of shoes, he said, were pledged by 300 teachers.

Shoes were furnished McKeesport's needy children last year at a cost of $2.75 per pair. The county's contract is for shoes costing $1.35 to $1.95 per pair.

Council Considers $50,000 Shoe Fund

Council's Finance Committee today was to consider the ordinance presented by the Department of Supplies asking for a second appropriation of $50,000 to purchase shoes for the city's needy. A letter to the Council says the first appropriation for shoes will be exhausted tomorrow. The request was made by Mrs. Enoch Rauh, of the City Welfare Department, and the ordinance drafted by the supplies department. The money will come from the sale of $800,000 bonds, part of the $3,000,000 emergency bond issue.

Pittsburgh today continued donating to the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor through purchases of commodities whose manufacturers donate part of their proceeds to the association.

Among such concerns are the Tom Collins, Jr., Company, beverage manufacturers, and the Pennsylvania Paper Stock Company.

The Tom Collins, Jr., Company is giving one-half cent to the association for each bottle of its carbonated drink sold in Allegheny County. The price is not increased to the public.

The paper firm pays the association 50 cents for each ton of paper received at its plant in excess of October receipts. The company has also offered to sell paper which business houses may donate to the association, turning over proceeds to the association without deduction.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Banks throughout the state have given out figures that indicate about $53,922,000 will be paid out to Pennsylvania depositors in Christmas savings funds this year. The national total is estimated at $500,000,000.

The state's figure is something like $40,000,000 less than that of New York state, which leads the nation.

In Philadelphia, 241,000 depositors have saved $11,578,000 to make Christmas merry.

Williamsport saved $399,000, the banks announce, as checks are sent out.

Banks in the Wilkes-Barre district will pay out about $987,500, the savings of 28,960 depositors, and this total is likely to move up to the $1,000,000 mark with savings from Pittston and vicinity.

Sunbury reports that 4,700 depositors in that district have saved $160,000 for Christmas.

Western Pennsylvania banks, meanwhile, are mailing out substantial checks, and business people look for a brisk increase in trade over the holidays.

Observers made 452 reports of driving violations during the month, bringing the year's total to 4,210. Passing street cars on the left and weaving were the most frequent violations noted.

Needles are flying faster and faster these few days remaining before the arrival of November 28, the opening date of the Misses Tebbettses' third annual exhibit of needlepoint, that old, old needle art.

The exhibit will be held at the Tebbetts studio, 1317 Sheridan avenue, East End, November 28 to December 2. And folks having needlepoint are lending it for the exhibit.

Many a woman is hurrying to put in the last stitches of her exhibit. Already many have sent their work, among them Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Mrs. Louise Packard, Mrs. William Reed Thompson, Mrs. George M. Laughlin, Jr., Mrs. William H. Mercur and Mrs. J. H. Waters, who lives in Johnstown.

Mrs. J. S. Unger will display her art, and so will Miss Agate Brown, Miss Helen Stucklager, Mrs. Henry Oliver Evans, Mrs. Charles Dahlinger, Mrs. F. G. Blackburn, Mrs. T. A. Mellon, Mrs. W. H. R. Hilliard, Mrs. R. M. Rush, Mrs. H. P. Davis, Mrs. F. I. Merrick, Mrs. H. H. Laughlin, Mrs. Herbert Du Puy, Mrs. J. Judson Brooks, Mrs. W. S. Elliott, Mrs. Silas N. Benham, Mrs. George S. Oliver, Mrs. William T. McCullough, Mrs. Stanley Brown and Mrs. William G. Costin.

And in between golf and other sports, athletic Mrs. T. J. Hilliard finds time for a bit of needlepoint, too, and will enter some work in the exhibit. * * *

Members of the smart set were few at the "Earl Carroll Vanities" at the Nixon last night. I saw Gretchen Bickford the only representative of the debutante set there, by the way, accompanied, as usual by David McCargo, and Gretchen was wearing a sophisticated model in black crepe with many shirred pieces of the material forming wide bands over the shoulders, descending in a V at the back and fastened to the bodice with a clip of brilliants. She wore a shoulder spray of gardenias.

Seen at 'Vanities'

Mrs. Van Lear Perry Shriver wore white crepe with a cape featuring a wide band of white ostrich. Mary Robinson chose a semi-formal gown of black velvet, and Mrs. T. M. Jones III chose a costume of black crepe with which she wore a mink coat. Chatting with her I noticed Mrs. T. J. Hilliard in a smart gown of the new hyacinth blue rough crepe.

Aspinwall Evening Club Group Meets

An unusually interesting meeting was held last night by the evening department of the Aspinwall Woman's Club. The speaker was Miss Clara Bruggeman, director of the Arsenal Kindergarten, where the club has given Christmas parties for eight years and for which the members will dress 72 dolls this year. Miss Jennie McMorran told the love story of Josiah and Sarah Wedgewood, the original makers of Queensware. A two-act play, "Mrs. Oakley's Telephone," was presented by Mrs. Gordon Stuart, Mrs. J. F. Steele, Jr., Mrs. D. V. Limborg and Mrs. Clifford Textor.

Colony of New England Women Holds Reception

In welcoming guests at the presidents' reception of the Pittsburgh Colony of New England Women yesterday, Mrs. Harold L. Lang said she wanted the word presidents' to be possessive plural, that the visiting presidents might share honors with her. Mrs. Archer E. Young, of Aylesboro avenue, opened her home for the reception, which was a charmingly informal affair. So much has already been written of Oscar Davis, the young violinist who gave the program, that nothing need be added here save that his recital, with Ferdinand Fillion at the piano, was presented with his usual musicianship, amazing in one of his years. Mrs. Judson Crane presided at the tea table.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

One of the most entertaining members of the older set is white-haired, bird-like, Mrs. Edward Grant Caughey, of Edgeworth. She enjoys a story, and doesn't mind telling one on herself.

Here's one she tells: Her father was a minister. During one sermon she recalls in her childhood her father preached on and on. At last she said:

"Father, don't you think that's enough? Everyone's getting tired."

* * *

W. J. Powell is one man who can talk about business at home. His wife even went to school to learn about insurance so that she could listen intelligently. Mrs. Powell, I might add, is the former Geraldine West.

* * *

Popular Margaret Meanor, whose name is one of those recently added to the debutante list, is interested in painting. And has done quite a bit. She and Adele Lippincott often paint together.

* * *

At every concert and theatrical first-night you can see petite, blonde Gretchen Bickford, a recent debutante, and young David McCargo. They look ever so attractive together—he is even blonder than she. And Gretchen always has a corsage of orchids.

FASHION SEEKS THE UNUSUAL IN DESIGNS AND MATERIALS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 15. — Paris continues to like the game of turnabout, as far as fashions are concerned. There is a favoritism for the costume that looks like what it isn't or that uses an unexpected material. The evening dress which looks like a tailored suit, yet is made of frail lace is a perfect example of the present French liking for disguising the use and the line of a costume.

* * *

THE TWO costumes in today's sketches illustrate this fashion scheme — the dress which has fur trimming and a detachable fur collar, and the coat, which has, instead of a collar or fur trimming, a string of beads at its neckline.

* * *

THE DRESS is from Lucien Lelong. It is in the rich dark brown which is so popular at the moment, and is trimmed with astrakan in the same tone. The costume is two-piece—a skirt which is straight to the knees, then flares out, and a jumper blouse which buttons at the beck and has fur bands over the shoulders and extend ind to the waist. The fur collar, when detached, leaves a high neckline, untrimmed.

* * *

THE CHANTAL coat, also in brown wool, is in the new seven-eighths length. It has sleeves which follow the raglan and immense pockets. Sleeves, shoulder lines and pockets are marked by visible stitching in self-color. A torsade of white beads replaces the customary collar.

A Happy Washday Adventure — by C.A. Voight

"Does wonderful lot of cleaning," says Mrs. Charlotte Hanwell of Philadelphia

"I USED Rinso for a long time so I knew how easy it was to get clothes white and bright. But I never realized until last week what a lot of work one large box of Rinso willdo. I started with my week's wash consisting of:

2 bureau scarfs	5 table cloths	9 shirts
6 doilies	19 towels	6 aprons
10 face cloths	12 dish towels	6 dresses
12 pillow cases	38 handkerchiefs	10 men's underwear
6 sheets	4 men's pajamas	24 pairs socks

"And that's not all! I washed the woodwork and floors 3 times, cleaned the tubs and basins a couple of times, and washed my dishes 25 times all with the one package. I think that's a record."

A little Rinso gives thick, long-lasting suds. Try it. See how much work one big box will do for you.

Adams Lectures At Century's Meeting

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Benjamin Adams, political and financial expert, gives the Democratic party 12 years to remain in power on the theory that the big men of the party will dominate it to the exclusion of the young men and that since their ages range from 48 to 62 their political usefulness will be over in about that time.

Mr. Adams, who is the Literary Digest's political and financial editor, brought a new personality and an entirely new manner of address to the Twentieth Century Club platform yesterday morning. He gave several reasons for the Democratic landslide—the depression, prohibition, the Hoover personality liability and the Roosevelt personality asset, and said the party would have won in any event, because it was due to win. He then went on to speak of the various "political revolutions" through which this country has moved, the difference between these and the revolutions of South America being, he said, that the latter are revolutions with sound effects.

Prosperity is likely to be fatal to business and to an individual and is always fatal to a political party, he observed. Incidentally, Mr. Adams said America has had only six real rulers—men who were "natural-born bosses"—Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson. Daniel Webster and Henry Clay were the two greatest statesmen the country ever produced, he said.

6 Real Rulers

The collapse of the Wilson "era of normalcy" meant a rebellion against everything Wilson wanted; nobody knew what they wanted, but everybody knew what they didn't want, he said. This last election marks the decay of the Republican group that took the control away from Wilson and now the Republicans will have to make records as governors of states or as opposing Roosevelt.

That Newton D. Baker is the ablest thinking machine in the United States; that Norman Davis probably will be secretary of state; that Roosevelt is a much abler man than his campaign speeches gave any inkling of; that he is an astute politician and probably will strengthen the things Hoover has started, and that there will be co-operation between the two men, were other points made by the speaker.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

Saves $2. No Cooking! So Easy!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs about one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

SUN-TELEGRAPH

SUN-TELEGRAPH AGAIN HELPS FATHER COX

Father Cox says that he has a bigger job on his hands than ever before in his efforts to help the needy and less in the way of funds to do it with. In discussing his activities at Old St. Patrick's yesterday, particularly regarding the outlook for the winter, he said:

"The election is out of the way, everybody seems to be satisfied, there is possibly an upturn for the better in employment, but from what I can observe it is going to be a long, slow pull with no promise of relief for the really poor for several months to come. My responsibilities are increasing every day and my income grows less day by day. Three and four years ago it was easy for me to get close to $1,000 for the poor in the regular Sunday morning collections at Old St. Patrick's. Today I am fortunate if I get $100. It is not that the people do not want to give. It is because they haven't the money to give."

In the meantime Father Cox has his constantly growing breadline, his demands from poor families for baskets of food and, particularly just now, his plan to furnish special baskets for Thanksgiving. Out at "Coxtown," his community farm, 64 families are "digging in" for the winter. "Shantytown" resounds with the hammer and saw in the efforts to make this unique village more comfortable when the cold and stormy weather sets in. No matter which way Father Cox turns he finds misery and want staring him in the face and little in the way of funds to improve conditions.

These are some of the reasons why the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph has inaugurated another subscription campaign to help him in his worthy work. For every subscription that he or his helpers get and for every subscription received on the special blank printed on this page Father Cox will get a liberal commission in cash to apply to his work among the poor of Pittsburgh.

So, if you are inclined to help the "father of the jobless" fill in this subscription blank, mail it today and you will help Father Cox. Bear in mind that Father Cox gets no assistance from the organized funds or charities. He depends entirely upon voluntary donations of money, food and clothing.

BYRD ECONOMY APPEAL HEARD BY 1,500

Admiral Urges Check On Tax Burdens Put On U. S. Public

Many of the elite of Pittsburgh, social, financial, industrial and political leaders, heard Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Senator David A. Reed, A. Rex Flinn and Charles M. Mills call for a crusade for governmental economy and a check on the mounting appropriations for veterans last night.

Speaking to more than 1,500 in Carnegie Music Hall, they asked, as sponsors of the National Economy League, for members from all walks of life to unite in preventing "the collapse of the government from overtaxation."

Suggesting a Western Pennsylvania branch of the league to aid the check on state, city and national expenditures, they asked for men and women, and especially war veterans, to carry on the organization's program.

REED LAUDS LEAGUE

Senator Reed was introduced by Mr. Flinn, and served as chairman. Reed paid tribute to the platform of the league, and said:

"In the 10 years I have served in Congress I have met many a vigilant and efficient lobbyist who wanted something, but nobody working for the people who pay the bills. When they want something from the government they become singularly eloquent over their largess, but there is no one there to represent the people.

"If we say 'No' to their demands, we are circularized through our districts as people of hard hearts. No one slaps us on the back and says: 'Well done; you saved the country some money.'

"In this organization we serve an ally arising, and we take courage."

Later, in introducing Mr. Mills, who told of the increase in government costs, he spoke of his pride in writing the bill which granted a compensation to disabled veterans.

STATE BONUS FEAR

Mr. Flinn, chairman for Western Pennsylvania, in making his bid for members, warned that:

"Soon you'll have to help stop a $50,000,000 bonus from Pennsylvania. No one went to war to fight for Pennsylvania."

Admiral Byrd spoke on the totality of taxation, explaining that local, state and national taxes annually cost the country $15,000,000,000—the earnings from the labor of our 120,000,000 people for three months. He continued:

"Should our citizens understand this startling fact there would be no necessity for our economy organization.

"Understand this. The people work three months each year for the benefit of a government which was founded to function for their benefit. This government, controlled by minorities, will soon take charge of the people unless the people will take charge of their government.

"Dangerous taxation affects every group and every class. The poor are more diststrously affected than the well-to-do. Though the poor man may pay no taxes directly, he pays up to the hilt in all he buys, in his rents and loss of jobs. Inordinate taxes keep him poor. Industries cannot bear all the burden of taxation without collapse and disaster for all the people."

NON-PARTISAN BODY

Explaining that the league is non-partisan, and indorsed by Gov. Roosevelt, President Hoover, Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith and others, he said it proposed cutting $2,750,000,000 from the cost of local and state governments. He declared local and state governments cost $11,000,000,000, and the federal government $4,000,000,000 a year, and added:

"In the federal government we think that $100,000,000 can be

SNIPER BULLET MISSES PFARR

A bullet whizzed by County Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr last night as he was lying in wait to obtain evidence of an incendiary fire, it was learned today.

Persons nearby heard the report of a gun and word spread that the fire marshal had been shot. Several telephone calls were received at his home that he had been wounded, and the alarm was heightened when he did not return home.

Today Pfarr explained that he frequently remains out all night to trap incendiaries. He said he did not know the origin of the shot.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

CORONA, Cal., Nov. 15.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph.

Herbert has invited Franklin down to see him. Now on the face of it that looks like the last word in hospitality. But let's look that gift horse in the face. Is Herbert just crazy about Franklin? No, children, prominent men are never crazy about each other. Herbert's in a hole on these foreign debts. Something has to be done right away. If he gives 'em another year or cuts the amount he will get all the blame. But if Franklin confers with him and then something is done, they split the blame 50-50. Now maybe two presidents can run a country. But if I was Franklin I would say, "Thank you for the invite, Herbert, but the moratorium is your onion. You will have to peel it. I don't want any of the tears of it in my eyes till I start drawing salary. Going on a little trip to South America. See you March fourth. Yours, with best wishes, Franklin."

WILD CARGO

With EDWARD ANTHONY

CHAPTER XXIX.

Half the snake's body was inside the room when the woman made her first effort to scream. As often happens when people are suddenly confronted by a reptile or an animal that belongs in the killer group, the woman's vocal cords failed her. Petrified with fear, it was as if she had no voice at all.

It was not until the snake started moving up one of the crib's supports that the woman found her voice. She let out a blood-curdling shriek and, as she did, the constrictor turned and eyed her coldly. Again the woman screamed.

The caboon (native gardener), who had been out in front of the house trimming the shrubbery, came running into the room, parang in hand. The Malay was followed by two of the Chinese house-boys.

The gardener arrived as the python, turning his head away from the woman, again centered his attention on the crib. By now the great snake's head was almost on a level with the top of the crib. In a fraction of a second he would be in striking distance. Putting everything he had behind the blow, the caboon swung his parang and dealt the constrictor a terrible blow behind the head.

By this time the Chinese boys were yanking away at the snake in an effort to drag it out of the room. The python thrashed around furiously, knocking the celestials in all directions. Meanwhile the caboon, having landed one deadly blow that did plenty of damage, kept hacking away until he severed the snake's head.

A FORMIDABLE WEAPON

All Malays are great knife-wielders, but your average caboon can outdo the rest of his race when it comes to handling a parang.

This formidable native knife is his principal means of defense as well as his main gardening equipment. He is never without it and in a fight wields

POLICE BUREAU CUTS URGED BY ALDERDICE

Would Drop Traffic Planning Bureau, Save on Lights

Elimination of some of the city's police stations, of the black horse troop of mounted officers and of the Traffic Planning Bureau is suggested in a letter from Budget Controller Robert J. Alderdice to City Council.

Alderdice further recommended traffic policemen be removed from corners regulated by lights. He suggested also that the city can save approximately $150,000 by cutting down the power of a number of street lights and eliminating others.

The budget director asserted Pittsburgh is the only city that has a light system and two policemen at most busy corners. He said the officers could be put on beats in other parts of the city.

Alderdice proposed that the Police Bureau take over the duties of the Traffic Planning Bureau. He said the Bureau of Electricity is qualified to handle electrical appliances used by the Traffic Planning Bureau in traffic regulation. He proposed that if Council thought elimination too drastic, the bureau be cut to a chief engineer, a draftsman and six men to care for lights and signals.

CLUB TO HOLD DEER SUPPER

Although deer season in Pennsylvania does not open until December 1, more than 250 members of the Glenfield Hunt and Fishing Club and their friends are to participate in a venison supper Thursday night in the Glenfield Volunteer Firemen's Hall.

Nine members of the club returned from the Adirondack Mountains Sunday with six deer. The kill ranges from four to nine-point bucks, with approximately 1,200 pounds of venison.

This was the club's thirteenth annual fall hunt in Hamilton County, New York. The camp was in charge of Constable Sam C. Graham, Ohio Township.

Pot Roast Stolen in Mt. Lebanon Home

Burglars who broke into the home of George G. McSwigan at 54 Woodhaven drive, Mt. Lebanon, early today, were hungry.

And if Watson rises up in bewilderment to ask how it is possible to make such a remarkable deduction, let him ponder this statement: The burglars took a pot roast from the refrigerator, nothing else.

Woman Retires From City Post

Mrs. Sarah McClanahan, 2519 Webster avenue, for 13 years attached to the Missing Persons Bureau, retired today. She was active in Fifth Ward politics and organized 19 Hoover clubs in the recent campaign. She said she and her husband would move to Virginia.

FOREIGN TRADE SESSIONS TO DRAW 2,500

Importance of Meet Here Next April Is Emphasized

Pittsburgh will be host to the largest number of outstanding business and industrial leaders ever to gather here at one time, when the National Foreign Trade Council holds its twentieth annual convention here the last week of next April, it was revealed by Eugene P. Thomas, president of the trade council, in a meeting here yesterday with local council members.

This convention, in the opinion of Thomas, a former vice president of the United States Steel Corporation, will be attended by approximately 2,500 industrialists and business men, including invited representatives from between 25 and 30 foreign countries.

TELLS PURPOSES

Setting forth the chief purposes of the conference, Thomas said:

"One of our major subjects will be the large sums accumulated by our exporters in foreign countries, which are frozen until normal flow of commerce can be resumed through international action, and the consequent repression of the continuance of our export and import trade."

Explaining that 2,500,000 American families are directly dependent upon our foreign trade and that all our families are indirectly affected by it, Thomas said:

"This convention will be the most important convention of the leaders in industry, finance, shipping, transportation and related enterprises in the country."

PROBLEMS VARIED

He added that the "unprecedented problems arising out of the depression, exchange restrictions, depreciated currencies in many countries and the departure of many countries from the gold standard" emphasize the importance of the conference. He added:

"We realize that only by our foreign customers being able to conduct profitably their own export business can we share in the resumption of world prosperity."

To map out plans for the convention, Mr. Thomas and Gardner L. Harding, secretary, conferred with J. Roger Flannery, chairman of the local committee, and George Gordon Crawford, president, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation.

HEAR HARDING TODAY

Other local members of the council are Howard Heinz, of H. J. Heinz Company; A. W. Robertson, chairman, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and H. S. Wherrett, president, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company.

Harding will address a meeting of the Pittsburgh Foreign Trade Council of the Chamber of Commerce at a noon meeting today in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

PROBE 2-ALARM STORE FIRE

The city detective bomb and arson squad was investigating a two-alarm fire which damaged the Peoples Hardware and Paint Company store at 5606 Penn avenue early today.

Firemen were forced to don gas masks to enter the smoke-filled building.

The loss was estimated at $8,000 by Fire Chief Richard L. Smith. The store is owned by Sam Katz, of 2118 Webster avenue.

Neglected Wound Fatal to Hunter

A Pitcairn man, who went about the streets for a week, after suffering an accidental head wound while hunting, died suddenly Sunday night.

Mr. Ammerman

He is Andrew Ammerman, 38, of 117 McGinnis avenue. While hunting last Tuesday in the woods back of Trafford, he was accidentally shot by a friend. He bandaged his head and went about his work for a week, unworried by the few shot that had entered his head. Sunday night he became delirious, and it was found some of the shot had touched his brain.

U. S. Jury Indicts 28 Under Dry Law

WELFARE TOTAL MOUNTS TO $1,240,545

Rabbi Goldenson Spurs Workers in Drive For $2,500,000

The Welfare Fund virtually reached the halfway mark toward its goal of $2,500,000 today as 1,056 new pledges were reported, amounting to $90,299.

Today's pledges boost the total thus far received to $1,240,545.

Dr. S. H. Goldenson, rabbi of Rodef Shalom Congregation, in addressing the workers, urged efforts be intensified to put the fund "over the top" by November 23, the scheduled date for the close of the campaign. Francis S. Guthrie, chairman of the special gifts division, presided.

ADMIRAL BYRD TALKS

At a luncheon of the women's teams yesterday, Mrs. John W. Lawrence announced the $61,000 in gifts, of which more than $30,000 came from the Sewickley division. Admiral Richard E. Byrd, in Pittsburgh for the National Economy League, appeared for a short talk.

High spot of the meeting was reached as Mrs. Lawrence announced contributions of $37.85 from the 80 crippled children in the Industrial Home for Crippled Children, on Shady avenue. Several of the children's letters sketched sacrifices made for the fund.

A gift of $200 was reported from a 101-year-old woman.

URGES SACRIFICES

Mrs. Lawrence said:

"Tell the 'hard nuts' about these letters and ask them to match the sacrifices of these crippled children and this old woman.

"If we could catch the spirit of these children, we could drive this campaign through with relentless energy and make our goal of $2,500,000 by the scheduled date of November 23.

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will not help us unless we are able to prove we have done our best to help ourselves. We have got to go out and get money from people who have their minds made up not to give.

"Other cities that are in no wise comparable to Pittsburgh are fighting to raise more than we are. Why, even Baltimore and Washington are out for $2,000,000 each."

The Welfare Fund today broadcast a plea that all rumors against the Welfare Fund be retold to Leo G. Griffith or workers in the fund offices in the Chamber of Commerce so they could be disproved. Contributions follow:

McGovern Hits Contract, Learns of New Probe

Col. C. C. McGovern, the County Commissioner, learned two things today:

1—That his colleagues, Commissioners C. M. Barr and W. L. Mansfield, had let a contract which McGovern described as "a heluva contract."

2—That the county's Bureau of Tests in the Department of Property and Supplies is being investigated.

These revelations were made when McGovern innocently inquired why the Universal Testing Laboratory should present the county a bill for $682.

He was told this was for the use of investigators in an inventory in the Bureau of Tests.

And the inventory has revealed that the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratories are using county equipment not only on county work, but on private jobs. Ray Sprigle, director of supplies, pointed out that the laboratories' contract permitted such use, but McGovern retorted:

"That was a heluva contract. And it wouldn't have been entered into if I had been here."

The chairman of the board was ill at the time.

McGovern then moved, and his colleagues agreed, that the Pittsburgh Laboratories return all county equipment.

Leo Riordan, county investigator, added to the revelations when he announced that the inventory had proved 1,000 thermometers, each worth $3, missing. It was not shown that the missing equipment was held by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratories.

Suitor Accuses Rival Of Running Over Him

Alleged to have run over G. W. Beadling, 35, of the York Hotel, with his automobile following an altercation over a young woman, William Arent, of 222 Federal street, is sought for questioning today by police.

Police Chief R. W. Fink, of Bridgeville, said both men have been calling on a young woman employe of the City Home at Mayview, visiting in a Bridgeville home. Last night, he said, both called at the same time. An argument followed and both suitors left.

Fink said Arent was driving an automobile and on his way home ran over Beadling as the latter crossed the street, causing bruises. According to Fink, Arent did not stop. Beadling was taken to the home of friends in Bridgeville.

lopped off to prevent overlapping, duplication, extravagance and inefficiency. Our government has not changed its methods for 50 years."

Admiral Byrd then spoke of the tremendous cost of federal aid to veterans. Explaining carefully that the league meant no attack on compensation for veterans disabled in the war, he declared the league would attempt to end the abuses of the laws. He said:

"According to the present law the cost of World War veterans alone will amount to $21,500,000,000 by 1945, an amount equal to the total cost of the war. Eventually the cost, according to the present law, will mount to over $85,000,000,000—four times the cost of the war. Our economic system will collapse under this system. The last widow of the World War, we figure, will die in 2050 A. D."

ANSWERS CRITICS

Mr. Mills, executive director of the League, answered critics of the sponsors of the league, pointing out that Alfred E. Smith's $6,000-a-year pension was paid for by himself during his 30 years' service in the state, and that it costs New York not a penny; that Gen. Pershing gets no pension, but a grant from Congress, and that Admiral Byrd got his grant from Congress for Polar exploration.

Girl Runaway, 13, Sought by Police

A city and statewide search was under way today for Miss Ruby Chesney, 13, niece of Mrs. Olive P. Ryan, reported missing from her home at 3371 Beechwood boulevard. The bus line proposes to run vehicles to Cochran road and has promised a five-cent fare for high school pupils. The petition will be referred, with the commissioners' approval, to the Public Service Commission, which next week will hear testimony on the coach company request.

The commissioners last night voted to employ John Hayes Smith, of Harrisburg, rate expert, to assist Attorney George Kountz in the township's fight on the South Pittsburgh water rates.

A smoke abatement ordinance, providing a $100 fine for violators, also was passed.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Frances Alerich, 29, of New Kensington R. D. 2, was burned seriously and her home destroyed by fire today. The woman's husband, Peter Alerich, working only one or two days a month, went hunting this morning.

Mother and baby were taken to the Citizens General Hospital, and the child later taken to a neighbor's home.

Coat Stolen When He Doffs It to Defend Women

When Anthony Angelo, of 1126 Reedsdale street, took off his top coat to defend his two women companions from attack by two highwaymen who accosted them in Shore avenue late last night, the bandits fled with his coat after slugging Angelo, he reported to North Side police.

Angelo said his companions were Mrs. Hazel Bollman, 27, and Mrs. Pearl Challis, 31, both of the Reedsdale street address. The coat, he said, was valued at $35.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Edwin Berg kept the wolf from the door by grabbing it by the throat. 2 SLEUTHS FACE THEFT HEARING

Two city detectives and a North Side resident today are awaiting a hearing on a larceny charge, brought by W. L. Schaefer, North Side automobile dealer, before Justice of the Peace George Blair, of Wilkinsburg. The defendants are Edward O'Rourke and Charles (Buck) Sweeney, city detectives, and Fred F. Hill, of 1144 Irwin avenue.

Schaefer charges that on November 8 the three men took a car from his garage, which Hill previously had reported stolen. Schaefer alleges that Hill purchased the car last May and still owed a balance when the car was reported stolen. A few days later, Schaefer says, two men appeared at the garage with the car saying "Here's the old iron Mr. Hill sent up." A hearing has been set for Thursday night.

New Toys Will Test Children's Ingenuity

Santa Carries Some Technical Devices In 1932 Pack

In Santa Claus' pack when he slips down the chimney this year, will be a brand new variety of toys.

Not only will they be as amusing as the old but they will exercise the little folks' intelligence. Most toys for the 1932 holiday season will require ingenuity to operate.

Santa will leave practical gifts for little Johnny such as a miniature smelting furnace to make his own lead soldiers and battleships. With the set comes a box of paints.

For Mary he will have an electric stove which really cooks; refrigerators that produce tiny ice cubes, and rubber dolls that may be washed in the new miniature bathtub.

For other boys Santa will have parts for an outboard speedboat, chemical sets for all sorts of experiments, machine guns that look real, tools for leather, wood and metal work, and sets from which to build an automobile, motor and all.

Other gay gifts will include a bucking broncho, automobiles with real headlights, and telephone and telegraph sets.

TURNER BREAKS HAWKS RECORD

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Now the holder of three major air speed records, Col. Roscoe Turner said today he does not expect to try another coast-to-coast flight until next spring.

Col. Turner yesterday added a new east-west transcontinental record to his list when he flew from New York to Burbank, a Los Angeles suburb, in 12 hours and 33 minutes, breaking Lieut. Comm. Frank Hawks' record by 2 hours 17 minutes. Turner also holds records for flights from Los Angeles to Mexico City and a round trip between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

On the East-West flight Turner averaged 208 miles an hour over the 2,540 miles. He had planned to attempt a round-trip air speed record, but was frustrated because of a tire blowout at Columbus, O., on the flight East Saturday.

The clothing stolen was valued at approximately $1,000. Sam Forman, 38, 2125 Wylie avenue, the attendant, told police three men entered the place and bound him while they collected the loot. He said he hobbled to the Duquesne Light Company substation nearby and called police after the robbers left.

Highest Bidder Gets Tombstone Bargain

A tombstone went to the highest bidder today in an auction unique for its subdued calm, in which the auctioneer barely whispered the good points of the piece of polished granite. A wistful expression about the eyes was the only "sign of victory" by the successful bidder.

The scene was the platform of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Eleventh Street Freight Station, and the small granite headstone was one of two which has not been called for by consignees.

WILD CARGO

By FRANK BUCK
With EDWARD ANTHONY

it with a skill that is beautiful to behold.

This is one case where cold steel proved itself superior to coiled lightning.

The python, as you have guessed by now, has always fascinated me. A great deal is now known about the species but it is surprising how little information there was, until recent years, on the subject of what happens after one of these great snakes devour a sizeable animal and the process of digestion begins.

For years friends in zoos and museums had been asking me to check up on a python after it had made a major kill and give them the facts about the snake's eventual elimination thereof.

It was not until 1926—at least 10 years after I had made my first promise to these friends—that I was able to secure the information they wanted.

CHANCE FOR EXPERIMENT

I was over on one of the small Dutch islands south of Singapore. These islands are full of snakes, especially pythons. It is a veritable paradise for the collector of these constrictors.

I had some orders for pythons from zoos and Ali and I set forth to fill them.

One of the snakes we landed was not only a perfect zoo specimen but also ideal for the purpose of the experiment I had promised to conduct. It had just eaten and from the shape of its great bulge I judged that its meal had consisted of one of the big wild boars of the island. It had swallowed its prey so recently that its jaw was still hanging open, the hinges not having yet reset.

We rolled our sluggish catch into a rattan fiber net and hired four native boys to shoulder it on carrying poles and take it to our boat. This was a 23-foot snake, whose normal weight was 275 to 300 pounds; with the wild boar inside of him, he took plenty of carrying.

In addition to this boar-filled specimen, we landed three others—smaller but worth-while representatives of their interesting species.

PUT SNAKE IN VAT

When we got back to Singapore I installed my bloated specimen in a big vat that had once been used by some Chinese residents for keeping live fish. I inherited this (it measured 9 feet by 12) when I took over the grounds where I built my compound.

I put straw in the bottom of the vat and installed my python in it, covering the top with heavy wire netting.

Then I sat back and awaited developments, taking measurements daily with a tape line to record the decrease in the python's inflated girth.

Each day the snake's bulge grew smaller, and on the ninth day was normal. I found hair, bits of bone, teeth and a substance very much like wet talcum powder. This substance, by the way, has medicinal properties. There is a chemical firm in Chicago that buys it from zoos and other sources.

All of which leads up to the thought that the truth about the python is strange enough. There is no need for stories such as the one I heard on my last trip to the Far East. It had to do with a huge python that was said to nave swallowed a water buffalo!

The reptile got the whole body down (so the story went) and only the head stuck out because the great spread of horns blocked the way. But the python, just to show it could not be stumped, was calmly waiting for the head to rot off. When I tell you that even a medium-sized water buffalo bulks larger than the average bull or horse you will see how ridiculous this yarn is.

Kanawha College Bans Fraternities

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 15.—Fraternities and sororities are allowed in colleges, high school and the state university quite generally in West Virginia, but Kanawha College, Charleston, has put a ban on them.

The decision was made by the committee on social and extra-curricular activities in conference with President L. S. McDaniel. It was held that the creation of social rivalry might tend to injure the wholesome spirit of the student body and withhold energies from other activities.

Step Up, Girls! Lewis Will Marry for Money

Wants Cash to Aid Family; Also Plays On Saxophone

When marriage bells ring for Lewis Cava, 24, of 188 Shetland avenue, they'll have a golden tinkle—or there won't be any marriage.

Lewis wants to make it pay.

Hard times in his family, where no one has been employed in two years, and the intermittent illness of his mother, have exacted from Lewis a sacrifice.

In a last effort to pull himself and his loved ones out "of the rut," he declares:

"I'll marry any girl or a widow, for a satisfactory sum."

But, confidentially, he hopes she will be pretty.

Lewis is somewhat of a musician, playing the saxophone and mandolin and composing a bit.

MINE SURVEY ORDERED HERE

A survey of old coal mines in various parts of the city has been asked of the City Planning Commission by City Council. Dangers have arisen due to the unemployed digging coal in many of the old workings, it is reported.

The City Planning Commission has already begun locating old mines, and has asked the co-operation of citizens who may know where openings are to be found. Old mines are often filled with deadly gases, it is reported, and in addition there is the hazard of fire.

The city has been compelled to spend large sums of money in extinguishing mine fires, the most recent example of which is the Herschel street fire in the West End. It may be necessary there to drive a tunnel to head off the flames, engineers say.

NOW! EASE SORE THROAT INSTANTLY!

All Pain, Soreness, Rawness Relieved In A Few Minutes

These Pictures Tell You What To Do

Remember Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way . . . discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Allay inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

ROOSEVELT BROADCASTS

Aid Red Cross, Plea of Next President

President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt makes a radio plea in behalf of the American Red Cross' annual roll call for members when he appears as the principal speaker during a special program broadcast over a coast-to-coast Columbia chain, including WJAS, tonight from 11 to 11:30.

Judge Payne

The program originates in Washington, Albany (N. Y.), Minneapolis, Chicago and Boston, and features in addition to Gov. Roosevelt's address, brief talks by two men and a woman, who, speaking anonymously, tell how they have been assisted by the Red Cross. The two men—one a Dakota farmer and the other chosen from the Mid-West unemployed—speak respectively from Minneapolis and Chicago. The woman, a resident of a small New England hamlet, goes on the air from Boston.

A "surprise" musical program featuring one of radio's best-known singers also is billed. Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, introduces the speakers.

The Three Keys, harmony exponents who not long ago set out from a small Pennsylvania town to make a name for themselves, inaugurate a new air schedule over a new network tonight. Previously heard over NBC-KDKA, the new schedule calls for two programs a week—Tuesday and Wednesday nights over NBC-WCAE at 11:15. Tonight's broadcast originates in the studios of WFI, Philadelphia.

A musical play, "The Melting Pot," written by the children of the Schiller School, is presented under the direction of Martha M. Lachman, principal of the school; Gertrude Kanhofer, teacher of music, and Ebba M. Lindbom, supervisor of music, over KQV tomorrow at 1 p. m. The performance is heard as a portion of the fifth of a series of educational broadcasts sponsored by the Board of Education of the Pittsburgh Public Schools.

Program Pointers

The dialing of a wrong telephone number starts one of the strangest romances ever conceived, "The Magic Voice," which makes its initial appearance over CBS-WJAS tonight at 8:15 with Elsie Hitz and George C. "Nick" Dawson portraying the leading roles. The dramatization, to be heard each Tuesday and Saturday at the same hour, is a distinct departure in script writing, following the characters for many weeks through their telephone conversations only. On the same station at 5, David Ross, Columbia announcer and winner of the 1932 award for diction by the American Academy of Arts and Letters, is interviewed by Bob Taplinger during the "Meet the Artist" broadcast.

Miss Hitz

Murray Seasongood, president of the National Municipal League, and Prof. A. R. Hatton, of Northwestern University, speak on the topic "Retrenching in State and Local Expenditures" during the "You and Your Government" broadcast on KDKA at 8.

"Cuban Spree," a special program composed entirely of music and songs of Cuba, including "Cuban Love Song" and "Cubanola Glide," is the Sanderson-Crumit presentation on WCAE at 8 tonight.

Fritz Reiner, distinguished conductor and head of the orchestral department of the Curtis Institute of Music, directs the Institute's 90-piece student orchestra in the first of a series of weekly symphonic concerts on WJAS at 4:15.

"The Osage Indian Murders," the true story of a series of cold-blooded murders on an Oklahoma Indian reservation, is the cigaret hour dramatic offering on WCAE at 10. Roger Wolfe Kahn provides the rhythms.

Welfare Fund speakers on the air from Pittsburgh stations today are: R. Templeton Smith, president, KDKA at 4:45; J. W. Lawrence, WCAE at 4:55; Mrs. Saul Lavine, WJAS at 5:30; Edward O. Tabor, WWSW at 8:20.

Georgie Price offers some Indian dialogue and a Redskin chant, "Wanna," as WJAS highlights at 7:45.

After an absence from the air of several weeks due to political broadcasts, Jay C. Flippen, bushy-haired comedian, returns with his "Jay C. Flippen-cies" over WJAS at 10:15 tonight. Featured stars, with Freddie Rich and a 40-piece orchestra, are Helen Board, Brad Reynolds, Elizabeth Barthell and the Four Clubmen.

Now that the election is over, Don Stauffer, director of "March of Time," is awaiting announcement of the new cabinet in order to complete his casting of the new "administration" . . . At present, one important member of the future White House family has been selected—Marion Hopkinson, New York society girl whose hobby is radio acting, has been chosen to portray the new First Lady of the Land. William Adams will continue to portray the role of Gov. Roosevelt.

Listening In—

Downey on Skates. Julia's New Pet. Announcers Popular.

Pickups . . . Jack Benny and the troupe return to New York this week to continue their broadcasts from the CBS studios . . . Morton Downey has organized a roller-skating club—of all things . . . Every morning they whiz along the asphalt walks in Central Park for an hour—and expect to get their hoops in action next week . . . The Pickens Sisters like to wear identical costumes both on the street and in the studios . . . Lanney Ross has rejected an offer to play in a musical comedy in dear old London.

Morton Downey

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit, after some pet shopping last week, have a new Boston terrier . . . and speaking of pets, Edith Meiser, author of the Sherlock Holmes dramas, has a Scottish terrier, "Dr. Watson."

More statistics . . . The vote percentages in that United-American Bosch radio star popularity poll show that announcers evidently hold more interest for listeners, this division receiving 18.7 per cent of the total vote cast, followed closely by singers, with 17.2 . . . But, in view of the fact that voters frequently may not know an actor's name and vote for a certain program (listed under miscellaneous) it's more than possible that dramatic entertainers lead the poll, the total for actors being 10.8 per cent of the vote and miscellaneous programs, most of which are dramatic, receiving 8.7.

He Thought There Was Something "Queer" the Matter With Him

WHAT HE REALLY HAD WAS STOMACH ACIDITY from TOO MUCH FOOD—TOO MUCH TOBACCO

How by Doing One Simple Thing, You Can Minimize After-Effects of Too Much Food—Too Much Tobacco—To a Marked and Amazing Degree

Modern science now throws a new light on the problem of overindulgence—eating too much, smoking too much, drinking unwisely. A way that millions are learning. And millions doing.

What you do is this:

"TAKE—2 tablespoons of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water before bed."

"TAKE—2 tablespoons of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water with the juice of a WHOLE ORANGE when you get up."

Or take six Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablets the same way, which give an equivalent amount of Milk of Magnesia, for each Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablet equals one teaspoonful of the liquid Milk of Magnesia.

Tomorrow you'll feel great. Science says it is the Quickest, Simplest and Easiest way to overcome the effects of too much smoking, eating, drinking known.

How It Works

Results are quick and sure because this small dosage of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts to alkalize the system. And an alkalized system is largely impervious to the bad after-effects of too much smoking or other overindulgence.

It sweetens and purifies your stomach. Banishes the acid headache, sour stomach, deadly depression that mark the price of immoderations.

Take Every Night

Every person who smokes excessively should know this. And never go to bed without taking this minute quantity of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia before. And every person who lives too well—overindulges—should never forget it.

Try it—once. Feel how clear your head feels the next day—how free you are from head-dullness and depression. You will be amazed.

When you buy, be sure you get the REAL article—Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Always ask for it by the name Phillips—for all "milk of magnesia" is not alike in effect. So take care to see you get Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—the kind doctors endorse; judged the most powerful neutralizer of stomach acids known.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

CRANKY HUSBAND

Gets FAST Cough Relief

"My husband is worse than a baby when it comes to taking medicine. That's about the only time he's real cranky. Last week when he had a bad cough I finally persuaded him to take something for it. Lucky for him it was Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup. It stopped his cough in just one hour. And I really think that he enjoyed taking it—the syrup tasted so good." Mrs. J. H. Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Cat and the Fiddle," musical romance coming to the Nixon next week, will be seen at the customary night and matinee performances, as well as at a special holiday matinee Thursday, November 24, Thanksgiving Day. It comes after a year on Broadway, with a cast including Bettina Hall, Michael Bartlett, Odette Myrtil, Jose Rubin, Bobby Jarvis, Catherine Field and George Maeder in principal roles. The company also includes a group of Albertina Rasch dancers and a symphonic orchestra. During its "depression year" in New York it garnered more than a million dollars.

Tonight's performance of "Unexpected Father" in the Pitt will be under the patronage of Kathryn Mae Joyce Post, American Legion, organization of A. E. F. nurses. Between acts the Drum and Bugle Corps of Homewood Post and Boys' Band of Lawrenceville Post, will play. Blanche Ring, who will be guest star of the Edwin Vale Players next week, will arrive today to begin rehearsals of "Cradle Snatchers," the comedy in which the resident company in the Pitt will appear as her support. Miss Ring's ancestors were of the theater—great-great-grandfather, great grandfather and grandfather and grandmother. None of the children of her grandparents, however, took to the stage, so there was a lapse of a generation before the acting urge of the Ring family reasserted itself in Miss Ring.

June Walker, Thurston Hall and Osgood Perkins, all of whom were seen here recently in that Theater Guild flop, "The Pure in Heart," are members of the cast of "Chrysalis," which will make its bow in New York tonight. Theresa Helburn, directing head of the Theater Guild, who staged "The Pure in Heart," is performing the same service for "Chrysalis," but it is not being blazoned as a Guild production. It is by Rose Albert Porter.

Schwab and De Sylva's "Humpty Dumpty," which closed here after a brief trial in September, came forth in revamped form with sufficient merit to be classed as a hit in Philadelphia, where it renewed contact with the stage under the title of "Take a Chance." Of the original cast there remain Sid Silvers, June Knight and Ethel Merman, the latter retaining, of course, that swell "torch" song, "Eadie Was a Lady." Silvers is teamed with Jack Haley in the comedy.

Y.M.&W.H.A. Group Announces Cast

"The Camel Through the Needle's Eye," the first co-operative Playhouse production, will be presented next Sunday and Tuesday evenings in the Y. M. & W. H. A. The cast selected is made up of Gizella Pallos, John G. Dawson, Beatrice Lasday, Norman Porter, Virginia Bialss, Adelaide Lasner, Richard Fishel, Alfred E. Smith, Frank Wertheimer, M. Bower Maze, Yetive Levinson, Walter Framer and Bobby Kann. The director is Friendly Ford.

Earl Carroll's Vanities Are for Eye and Ear And Nose

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Earl Carroll's ninth Nudist Colony came to the Nixon Theater last night, and the natives of Cambodia have nothing on Earl's aggregation. The show is called the "Vanities," perhaps because some of the costumes could be carried in a vanity case—being quite compact. There is so much of this—or so little of it—that it begins to pall after the seventh lesson in anatomy. When the Dinosaur comes out, with Lucile Page in his huge maw, and moves down to the front of the stage, dangling her dangerously over the bald-headed row, it is perfectly clear why he doesn't swallow her. He has been surfeited on pink flesh and parabolic curves. He is a sick Dinosaur, overfed and psychoanalyzed till he is drowsy.

Mr. Seibel

After the nudities an Earl Carroll show is known by its crudities. There are bedroom scenes with wrestling matches aplenty; slaps, and kicks, and jabs are administered by the ladies to the gentlemen and by the gentlemen to the ladies in a way reminiscent of the Argonne and Verdun. Among the credits given in the program should be one for arnica. The only person that does not get kicked and slapped is the Dinosaur—they wouldn't hurt his prehistoric feelings, for he is a gentle beast in wild company.

NOT FOR DEACONS

This is distinctly not a show for deacons, elders or Sabbath school teachers. It will rejoice the Padishah of Cambodia, especially if he can get all the ultra-modern gross allusions. Much of this is loosely funny—and even the deacon might laugh at it. Much of it is tedious—and it would bore even the Padishah after the eleventh dose.

The two most amusing chapters of the two volumes are furnished by Al Trahan, in his "Paderoushsky" act, and by Frank Mitchell and Jack Durant in a skit on the movies. Trahan, assisted by Youkona Cameron, extracts gallons of laughter from a piano, some chewing-gum and the lady's vocalisations. Mitchell and Durant are knockabout comedians whose osteopathy is volcanic.

But there is also Lucile Page, who can walk on her hands while she dances on her feet—she is all joints and the rest of her india-rubber. She appeared to barbaric accompaniment in the Ravel Bolero, while agile Amazons waved glass scimitars through the kaleidoscopic atmosphere.

GALAXY OF STARS

There are many clever people in this show. Sylvia Nelson puts into it a little refinement, comparatively speaking. Betty Veronica brings a cute toss of the head and a capacity for explosive diction. Ray Sax can play various musical instruments while he is whirling a rope and dancing a la Russe. Jack Starr also does some mad dancing.

There are also some clever scenes, but the funniest gags can't be printed. In fact, some of them are apt to be esoteric to deacons and elders and Sabbath school teachers who know not the ways of the wicked world.

As for the dances, they are rhythmic and colorful, the most effective being the "Frenzy of Hands," with a Max-Reinhardty weirdness. There are parasol dances, and pyjama dances, and veil dances, and every sort of dance St. Vitus ever dreamt of.

It is all very rowdy and very bawdy, and full of spangles, revolving lights, glitter and glory. There are even some voices, but most of the show is for the eyes, with something for the nose.

It has been approved by the Padishah of Cambodia.

Next Baxter Picture Is Selected

Warner Baxter's next Fox picture will be "Dangerously Yours," which is to be adapted for the screen from the story by Eric Noel. In this production Baxter will have as leading lady Miriam Jordan. Miss Jordan, English stage actress, while a newcomer to the cinema, has created a steady demand for her services. "Dangerously Yours" marks her third leading role for the Fox Film Corporation in three months.

Charlie Ruggles Gets New Lead Role

"Murder at the Zoo," soon to be produced by the Paramount studios, will have Charlie Ruggles in one of the leading roles, it was announced today. The story is an original screen play by Seton I. Miller and Philip Wylie. No director has been assigned. Ruggles, now completing "Madame Butterfly," has had a number of important roles within the last few months.

Cute Soubrette in Film At German Cinema

Dolly Haas is the charming central figure in "Liebeskommando" (Love in Command) at the German Cinema this week. Dolly is a soubrette who acts a boyish role with cute ways and without offensive tricks. The scene of the romance is a military academy, where the heroine takes her brother's place for three years while he is studying music. It is a bit hard to believe, but if you have faith you will be amused. When a lieutenant who has the reputation of being a great lady-killer comes to the academy, troubles begin for Dolly, but she is equal to almost anything. After a very amusing scene in which her father, speaking only Italian, fails to convince the head of the school that his daughter is not a man, Dolly is kissed by the lieutenant and all ends as romances should. Catchy songs add glamour to a plot with more originality than plausibility.

Farce in Pitt Revolves Around Imaginary Matrimony

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Unexpected Husband" is the title of the farce, written by Barry Conners, that was presented in the Pitt last night by the Edwin Vail Players. It might reasonably carry also a subtitle, "Or How Hooch Promotes Matrimony," thereby making Mr. Daniel Cupid just a plain "wet" instead of being all wet, as he is so often accused of being. It is a rather silly piece, but, of course, farce never has been in the habit of masquerading in the cloak of sense, so what difference does a little—or a lot of—silliness mean when it promotes laughter.

The main trouble about any farce is that while it may develop logically enough after it gets started, the initial impetus that sets its sequence of misunderstandings in motion always is so childishly implausible.

A girl from Texas, in this play, decides that she is not going to marry a sappy fellow she has been going around with. Her father, a gun-toter from the cattle country, has arrived in town intent on stopping the wedding by a little leaden argument with the prospective bridegroom. Daughter goes to a rendezvous to tell her fiance it is all off, and finds there instead his friend. A few highballs and they pass out, to wake up and find themselves in a hotel bed, where they had been placed under supposition they were married.

It's strange how many people who have no business being there can invade the privacy of a hotel room, and our hero and heroine are no sooner awake, and deciding that they must have got married and forgotten about how it happened, than there begins a parade in and out the room. The invaders range from hotel detective to newspaper reporter and photographer, the indignant fiance the girl did not get around to dismiss and her father, fresh and hot from Texas and flourishing a hefty gun. Working themselves out of the mess is what makes the fun.

Alden Chase and Betty Hanna play the leading roles. Sam Flint is the cow person from the Pecos country. Baker Moore is the discarded admirer. Henry Richards portrays the reporter, and Roy Elkins and Ella Ethridge are a couple whose hearts are as big as their thirst—plenty big.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

A FEW YEARS ago a young English actor named Gordon arrived in this country. He had played several fairly important parts in London, but he felt that his chances for stardom were greater in America. So over he came, with the world before him.

Gordon was a young chap then. He's a young chap today. He is, perhaps, 30 years of age. He looks older.

The first year in America, Gordon did fairly well. Nothing to shout about from the housetops. But well enough for a start. He appeared in two productions.

With things looking fairly bright, then, Gordon fell in love. The girl was a showgirl in a Ziegfeld production, and the actor went for her like Garbo in a clinch. After his show was out, he ran over to call for her every evening. She liked him. His curly hair. His boyishness. His English accent and very correct diction.

In due time they were married. He took her from Ziegfeld and placed her in an apartment for two. She made him orange juice in the morning and he took her out for dinner. At night he worked in the theater. And time hung heavy on her hands.

About a year after the marriage, a baby was born. Gordon was in seventh heaven. But it's not certain that his wife was even in the first one.

When it came time for Gordon to go on the road, he asked if she would take the baby and come with him. She shook her head.

"That's not for me, Gordon," she replied. "I don't want to travel. If you don't mind, I'll take the child and go out for a visit to my folks in Wisconsin. We'll be better off."

The actor didn't think so—but he had no choice in the matter. He started on a road tour with his company and kissed his wife good-bye at the station. She went to Wisconsin—and out of his life.

Gordon didn't know all this, however. He lived with the pictures of his wife and his kid, and he wrote her long letters. They were separated for some time, and her letters to him stopped coming completely. Finally came the news that she had fallen in love with another man and was suing him for divorce.

The actor went around in a daze. His friends tried to comfort him. One of his pals suggested that he fight the case.

"Go out and battle with her," urged the friend. "Show her that you're entitled to some consideration."

The young actor merely gazed at the floor.

"It wouldn't do any good," he murmured hopelessly. "When a woman doesn't love you, there's no use fighting." . . .

* * *

Time flew by. Gordon was divorced now. His wound had healed to a great extent.

He was on the road with an English drama that had created a tremendous success in this country. His part was excellent, and he was filling it to perfection.

His company hit Atlantic City one week. The very first night in that resort, after the opening of the play, Gordon attended a party. He was introduced to a beautiful girl, a former "Miss Atlantic City" in a beauty pageant. And when he took her home from the party that night, he knew that he was in love for the second time in his life.

Perhaps it was all he had gone through. Perhaps it was the great disappointment in his first wife. Perhaps it was anything you choose to call it. At any rate, he felt that if he could make this girl his wife, a new happiness would come to him.

For a week Gordon courted the girl. They went everywhere together. She saw the play three times that week—and waited for Gordon backstage after each performance. When the show closed that Saturday night he took her home and sat upon the arm of her chair.

"I love you," he said simply. "You must know that. I haven't much to offer you—but all that I have is yours. I will be a devoted husband to you if—"

The girl stopped him. She peered at him through frightened eyes.

"Don't say any more," she whispered. "I was afraid you were going to say what you've said.

"I can't marry you, Gordon. I admire you very much as a friend. But that is all. I am engaged to another man. And it's he whom I love."

The blow was a horrible one. The actor walked into the night and sat by the sea until the following morning. He contemplated suicide—but he fought it off. The girl had been very unfair to him. She should not have led him on. Perhaps if he went back to her home and—

But he didn't. When the dawn came up, he walked slowly back to his hotel and began to pack.

"It wouldn't do any good to see her again," he told himself. "When a woman doesn't love you, there's no use fighting." . . .

Gordon came back to New York and did what so many men have done before him. And what so many men will continue to do long after he has been shipped to another world in a wooden box. He went on a terrific bat and sought to embrace any woman who would look at him.

He tossed away a film contract he had signed. He neglected to show up for a play that was then in rehearsal. And he awakened one morning to find himself both sick and broke.

He had few friends left. You don't keep many pals when you're on a bat. They like to talk about you—but they seldom rise to help you. And Gordon found that his one remaining friend was a woman.

She was a woman he had met in his drunken moments. She was not what the world terms a respectable woman because she depended upon a sugar papa to rent her apartments and pay her bills. But she was regular. Far more regular—and probably more moral—than many of those who tread the slippery path of virtue and secretly envy women like her.

She fell in love with Gordon and helped to bring him back. When Gordon was stupidly drunk and put in phone calls to that girl in Atlantic City, she would sit in another room and cry. Gordon knew nothing about these things. He treated her as a good friend—and she asked for nothing more.

It was this woman who finally nursed him back to health. She paid his hotel bills and moved him to a cheaper residence. Today, he's on his feet again.

And the woman who loves him? Well, maybe Gordon has an inkling of her real feelings. But he'd rather not know. And the woman will never tell him.

"It wouldn't do any good to tell him," she told a friend the other day. "He cares for me only as a friend. And when a man doesn't love a woman, there's no use fighting." . . .

Paris Vogues Brought to Studios

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, 3Cing Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 15.

Milady will wear no more puffed sleeves on her evening gown.

This is the dictate brought back from Paris by Travis Banton, fashion creator for the Paramount studio.

"We have found out," says Mr. Banton, "that these sleeves are too often rumpled or crushed by wraps. Consequently, the new evening gown will follow the body line closely.

"This does not mean the abandonment of the puffs. They still will be used on wraps and for day wear. Being particularly adaptable for fur, they are causing an important revival in this type of trim. Paris, in fact, is fur crazy. Everything is silver fox or sable."

Another Parisian trend, declares the style expert, is a greater use of feathers. And here the fad is directly traceable to the hats and costume worn by Marlene Dietrich in "Shanghai Express."

Marlene Dietrich

To the fashion designer, however, the big surprise in Europe, is the new smartness of London. English women, Banton reports, now dress as smartly as their Parisian sisters. Noontime at the Ritz is a veritable fashion show.

And now another tip. Say good-bye to reds. This spring both Paris and Hollywood will feature grey.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE

Hollywood stars will see themselves plastered in informal poses across three pages of an English newspaper. The candid camera views were taken by the wife of Charles Laughton when she visited the film capital . . . It's Honolulu again for Dorothy Mackaill after the first of the year. She's already booked her passage . . . Out here they're gazing a little wide-eyed at Mannie Self, co-author of "Blessed Event." In one hour after his arrival to write for Paramount, he had bought a car, a radio, rented an apartment and had his suit pressed. . . . When M-G-M gave Karen Morley a plain, old-fashioned wedding ring to wear in "Flesh," she showed unusual excitement. This same ring was worn by Greta Garbo in "Anna Christie"; by Lynn Fontanne in "The Guardsman" and by Norma Shearer in "Smilin' Through" . . . Gene Raymond gave a second and he hopes, final farewell party at the Cocoanut Grove. Among those present were Jesse Lasky, Jesse Lasky, Jr., Francis Dee, B. P. Schulberg, Raquel Torres and Charles Feldman.

"Old Dark House," a mystery thriller, is booked to open tomorrow in the Sheridan Square. In the cast are Boris Karloff, Charles Laughton, Lillian Bond and Gloria Stuart.

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell co-star again in "Tess of the Storm Country," opening Thursday in the Stanley. The two stars are seen in a boy-and-girl romance.

The locale of "Kongo," picture billed to open in the Fulton Thursday, is the tropics, where Lupe Velez, one of the principals of the film, is the object of a man's revenge.

The Aldine Theater will reopen Monday night with the picture version of Eugene O'Neil's play, "Strange Interlude." Heading the cast are Norma Shearer and Clark Cable. After Monday there will be two shows daily.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

College Tax Questioned. Name Cannell for Gate. Stars Make Up Packers. Carey Grades Pitchers. Hafey Regains Health. Guessing on Ring Job.

MAY TAKE FOOTBALL LEVY TO COURT

THE CONSTITUTIONALITY of the act under which an amusement tax of 10 per cent is being paid to the federal government on tickets to football games and other athletic events sponsored by state-supported colleges may be tested in the courts. The National Collegiate Athletic Association, of which Dr. Charles W. Kennedy is president, appointed a committee last summer to look into that side of the tax system now in force, and it is said the investigators found among counsel consulted in various parts of the country such a unanimity of opinion that a tax on state college sports is unconstitutional that action to lay the matter before the courts is being considered.

Dr. C. W. Kennedy

According to reports, one of the most prominent attorneys in the country is likely to be retained in the movement to get a decision on the bill. If the law as applied to state-supported colleges is declared unconstitutional the government will be asked to refund all tax moneys collected. The colleges would then refund to purchasers, and on the chance of such a development athletic chiefs suggest that all patrons retain the stubs of tickets on which a tax is paid.

THE NAME OF Jackson Cannell, of Dartmouth, has been mentioned again as a probable addition to the list of coaches whom rumor and gossip have sentenced to get the gate.

Cannell has won only one major game in two seasons. His Dartmouth team beat Cornell last year, but lost to Columbia, Harvard and Stanford and was tied by Yale. This year the Green has been defeated by Penn, Harvard, Yale and Cornell. Cannell's critics insist he stresses the forward pass at the expense of a sound running game.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT W. W. (Pudge) Heffelfinger would play for five minutes at guard with alumni of Minneapolis Central High School against Minneapolis South High alumni, recalled to veteran football followers the earliest all-star professional teams here.

Heffelfinger was one of the stars imported to play for the old Three A's (Allegheny Athletic Association), on what is now the North Side in the early '90's. The lineup included also George Brooke, Sport Donnelly and other luminaries of that era. Heffelfinger, now 64, was all-America guard at Yale in 1889-90-91.

EASTERN FOOTBALL GOSSIP this fall, as usual, has confused the three coast colleges bearing California names. University of California, located at Berkeley, is the mother institution, being 60 years old. Navy Bill Ingram is the coach and the team is known as the Bears. University of Southern California is an endowed institution, located at Los Angeles. Howard Jones is the coach, and the team is called the Trojans. University of California at Los Angeles was formerly called University of California Southern Branch, but is now termed U. C. L. A., as it is too big to be known as a branch, having more than 6,500 students. The coach is Bill Spaulding and the team is called the Bruins and the Uclas.

Clark Hinkle

TWO PLAYERS WELL known in this part of the football map are important cogs in the famous machine of the Green Bay Packers, who have ruled the National Professional League for three years. They are Clark Hinkle, former Bucknell fullback, and Cal Hubbard, who starred as a tackle at Geneva under Bo McMillin.

The lineup is studded with former college brilliants, some of whom earned all-America prominence and others who missed national fame merely because they were not affiliated with some large university team. Among the latter may be mentioned Arnold (Flash) Heber. He played for St. Regis College and few outside the district ever heard of him, yet he is one of the best backs in the pro league.

THE PACKERS, ESTABLISHED as the strongest team on the American gridiron, use the Notre Dame offense and have the type of players to execute the attack well. The coach is E. L. Lambeau, a native of Green Bay and a former Notre Dame player.

Lambeau has been coach of the pro champions for 11 seasons. Some of the players have been with the team almost as long. Verne Lewellen, for instance, has been playing for the Packers nine years. Lewellen is one of the greatest punters of all time. High spirals going 60 yards and more are easy for him.

THERE ARE AT present 17 pitchers on the roster of the Brooklyn baseball club. Four of them—probably Moore, Krider, Mattingly and Jones—will be dropped during the off-season and Rosy Ryan, former Giant, may be added. Manager Max Carey plans to pick his regular staff by a grading system during spring training. On the original list he will make Van Mungo top man, with Bill Clark second. If Dazzy Vance is retained he may be rated third tentatively, with Hollis Thurston fourth, and so on. As the training season progresses, the list will be subjected to frequent changes, the shifts to be governed by individual performances. The first nine pitchers on the roll when training ends will compose the staff.

DONIE BUSH has good news already about Chick Hafey. The latter's illness last season was a death blow to Cincinnati's chances of getting anywhere, but he is reported in good shape again, and his return to form will be a great aid to Donie in putting the Reds on their feet. The bulletin came from Bobby Wallace, Red scout, who called on Hafey in Berkeley, Cal.

"Hafey looks just as big and strong as he did before influenza laid him low last summer," Wallace reports. "He eats like a horse. It's my prediction that he will be in perfect trim when he reports to us in the spring. That means he will be in for one of his old-time big seasons."

A CLIPPING FROM an issue of the New York World in 1912 reads: "Pitcher Jack Quinn, who will be 32 years old next birthday, has worn away his usefulness and the Yanks have sent him to Rochester."

Twenty years afterward we find Quinn hunting in the mountains at Catawissa, Pa., to keep his legs in shape, preparatory to going to Hot Springs, Ark., in January and then to training camp in Miami to get ready for another season with the Dodgers. For a man who had "worn away his usefulness" in 1912 he's still pretty chipper.

Jimmy Bronson

TAKING IT FOR granted that James A. Farley will be named for the Roosevelt cabinet and will therefore step out as chairman of the New York Boxing Commission, fistic leaders in the Empire State continue to while away the time between fights trying to guess the identity of his successor. They have already mentioned a swarm of names in the speculation, including those of Tom McArdle, Jim Corbett, Jimmy Bronson, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Dave Soden, Lester Patterson, Frank Erne, Dan Shilling, J. Walker Wear, Grover Whalen and many others. Dempsey and Tunney are out because they are not residents of the state. Ill health is in Corbett's way. Patterson says he is not a candidate. Soden, a Brooklyn business man and powerful politically, has not committed himself. Among boxing men, Bronson, who used to manage Jack and Pete Zivic and other Pittsburgh fighters, has many supporters.

BRIDENBAUGH'S ELEVEN BIDS FOR CROWN

By JULIUS LEVIN

In the career of any successful football coach comes a time when the hope of a perfect grid machine, one that functions on all cylinders, is realized.

Phil Bridenbaugh

Scholastic football fans who have been following Western Pennsylvania high schools for any length of time will recall some of the really great elevens that have represented Washington, Greensburg, Clairton, Beaver Falls and New Castle in past years.

The hope for a perfect grid machine appears to have been fulfilled at New Castle High School, where the Scarlet Hurricane, coached by Phil Bridenbaugh, former mentor at Geneva College, is sweeping its way to championship heights, leaving nothing but ruin and desolation in its wake.

RATED GREATEST

Those who have seen the Lawrence countians in action this season stamp them as the greatest high school football team to be developed hereabouts in a number of years and their record for the campaign to date serves to bear out the contention of fans and critics alike.

Nine powerful high school elevens have attempted to check the mad dash of the Bridenbaugh combine so far this season and all have fallen by the wayside in a manner that left no doubt as to the superiority of the Lawrence countians.

The New Castle eleven has only one more barrier to pass to complete the greatest season ever enjoyed by the Scarlet Hurricane and that will come on Thanksgiving Day when Turtle Creek Union is met on Taggart Field, New Castle.

TITLE FAVORITE

The Bridenbaugh eleven is one of the 12 schools enrolled in the class AA Conference, composed of the outstanding football teams in Western Pennsylvania. All members are required to play four games with league opponents and New Castle already has won three, defeating Charleroi, Washington and New Kensington. The fourth will be met in Turtle Creek Union on Thanksgiving Day.

New Castle's chances of winning the Conference title are bright. Jeannette, coached by Markley Barnes, is leading the parade at present with four victories and will play its fifth league opponent when it tangles with Greensburg, likewise undefeated, on Thanksgiving Day.

One of the remarkable features about the brilliant showing of the New Castle eleven is the perfect co-ordination between the backfield and line. Every regular on the team has been drilled to play his position to perfection. In all contests played so far by the Lawrence Countians, the opposing tacklers have found the New Castle blockers will nigh impregnable, the result of which permitted the fleet-footed Bridenbaugh backs to get away for long gains.

ALL-STAR TEAM

Picking the best performers on the team would be a difficult task to say the least. Bridenbaugh has four great ball carriers in Uram and Nickum at halves, Rambo at quarter back and a standout in Walter Kominic at fullback.

Listed among the victims of the New Castle eleven are two powerful non-league teams, Altoona and Youngstown South. Altoona is still talking about the smooth manner in which New Castle upset its favorites. Youngstown South was undefeated and untied prior to its 21-7 setback at the hands of New Castle.

Only three teams have scored on New Castle this season, they being Miles Bryan, of McKees Rocks; New Kensington and Youngstown South. The record for the season follows:

New Castle	27	Union Township	0
New Castle	50	McKees Rocks	6
*New Castle	25	Charleroi	0
New Castle	55	Coraopolis	0
*New Castle	21	Washington	0
*New Castle	45	Ellwood City	0
New Castle	18	Altoona	6
*New Castle	7	New Kensington	7
New Castle	21	Youngstown South	7

*Conference games.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A HANDLESS VIRTUOSO—Gino Palmisano, of Naples, was born without hands, about 25 years ago. In the face of this handicap he contrived to acquire a fine handwriting, a college education and the degree of doctor of laws. But most astounding is his mastery of the piano. From either of his wristless arms hangs a finger-like appendage, which he has trained to operate the piano keys with complete mastery. He has appeared on the concert stage in Rome and Naples. His repertoire includes masterpieces for the foremost composers. He has evolved a method all his own, and to see the magic that his sleeve-covered arms can work at the piano one thinks of genius triumphant over all obstacles.

TOMORROW: THE INDEFATIGABLE MAYOR.

Sun-Telegraph to Be Host to 20 Fans At Pitt-Stanford Game Next Week

Ten lucky letter writers will get two tickets each for the Pitt-Stanford football game at the Pitt Stadium Saturday of next week, as guests of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

They will be selected by Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, former Pitt coach, now mentor of the Stanford University Cardinals, of California.

All contestants have to do is to write a letter on an interesting football topic. Warner wants to know what phases of the game interest them most, and will answer their questions on the air during the weekly all-America broadcast of Christy Walsh, to be heard on a nationwide hook-up from WJAS the night before the Pitt-Stanford game at the Stadium, Saturday of next week.

WARNER TO PICK WINNERS

Warner and his players are due here Tuesday of next week. Upon his arrival, Warner will sift through the fans' letters, and pick out the 10 that strike him as most interesting. The names of the winners will be announced by Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, during the weekly program of the Trained Seals of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE, Wednesday evening of next week. The deadline for receipt of letters is Tuesday midnight—one week from tonight.

Ask Warner what he thinks of the new rules in vogue this year, whom he considers the outstanding player of the year, his greatest player of all time, his greatest team of all time, or any other question you'd like to have him answer. Thousands of letters probably will come to him, but you have an even chance with every other contestant to win yourself a pair of tickets for the closing game of the season, a big intersectional contest which brings Warner's team almost 3,000 miles across the country to battle the charges of one of his own products, Dr. Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, who was a guard on Warner's first teams here, almost two decades ago.

ANSWERS OVER AIR

Address your letters to Pop Warner, in care of the sports department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Submit as many questions as you wish, but only one in each letter—and then listen in to the Trained Seals next week for the announcement of the winners. And then hear Pop Warner's answers to the selected questions over WJAS, Friday night of next week.

SPISAK LOST TO TECH FOR BIG FRAY

By JESS CARVER

Being under the impression that too many of his ball players took their usual Monday rest two days ahead of time, and had themselves a nap against Nebraska last Saturday, Coach Jock Sutherland gave his Pitt varsity a strenuous dummy scrimmage yesterday afternoon and promised 'em another one for today.

The good Doctor, while sympathetically cognizant of the fact that his players have been up against tough opponents week after week and naturally are tired and battered, still could not excuse some of the errors that popped up in the tussle with the Cornhuskers, and is seeing to it that they are not repeated in the city classic with Carnegie Tech this week.

MAY DEMOTE STARS

In fact, two or three of the lads who've been holding down varsity positions on the Panther team this fall may get the well-known bounce between now and Saturday. About the only men who did come in for Sutherland's critical monologue were Warren Heller, who never does anything wrong; Mugsy Skladany, who staged a comeback after a so-so performance against Penn, and steady ol' Joe Tormey.

The Panthers this week will not quit the city to go into hiding, as they have been known to do on the eve of previous encounters with Tech. The Panthers will do all of their training right here in town, it was announced today.

Meanwhile, over at Carnegie Tech, where practice this week is being so secret that yesterday they almost barred even Maxie Hannum, the publicity gent and basketball coach, a severe blow to the Skibo hopes was dealt when it became known that Bill Spisak, Midland sophomore halfback, was "out" for the Pitt game.

SHOULDER DISLOCATED

William suffered a dislocated and possibly splintered shoulder in the Xavier game, and figures to spend the rest of the fall reading Alger books.

With Spisak on the shelf, the Tartan coaches face the prospect of constructing themselves a brand new backfield. They'll have to get a new left halfback, and have only two men to choose between, Art Carlson, who started out as a quarterback, and Tom Coulter, the hurdler, who played his first game against Xavier. Carlson hasn't been in a ball game all season. He looked pretty good as the freshman quarterback last year.

VISITORS ARE BARRED

Tech had every available assistant manager walking a beat yesterday as the Plaid went to work behind barred gates. The "Keep Out" sign was up, and no mistake. It even had "positively" written before it. The Techs do not intend to pass up a single bet as they prepare for the setto with the unbeaten, but twice tied Panthers.

Aside from Spisak, the Tech team came out of the Xavier game in good physical condition. None of the bruised and battered Panthers had their hurts aggravated much except Tormey, who wound up with a bruised leg, and Izzy Weinstock, who had his feelings hurt.

IZZY STOPS HELLER

It was Weinstock who stopped Heller on the goal line, or rather, the 13-yard line, there in the third quarter when it looked like Pitt had the Huskers on the run. It was fourth down and seven to go and Hogan elected to send Heller off tackle. Nebraska had substituted Schleuter at left tackle in place of Hulbert a play before and Schleuter was Weinstock's man to take on the play.

Now Hulbert had been playing a waiting game all afternoon and Weinstock figured the new man would do the same, so when

NUSSBAUM MAY WIN POST

Dick Nussbaum looks to be about the best bet Elmer Layden has for replacing injured Ben Pawlina at right halfback in the Duquesne lineup. Both Steve Marin and George Chacko are in line for duty at the position, but the Ambridge lad appears to have the edge.

If Art Strutt were in good condition, Layden might be tempted to shift him to right halfback and use Marin as the reserve fullback. Strutt was out of uniform all last week and is not expected to see action against Catholic University Friday night.

The Dukes leave here Thursday morning for Washington and will meet Catholic University in the Cardinal's home-coming game under the Brookland Stadium floodlights.

Practice sessions yesterday brought fourth some of the Cardinal strategy as gleaned by Joe Bach, line coach and chief scout. A skull drill preceded the usual field workout for the Dukes.

The excellent recent performances of the Dukes, and especially the fine ball-carrying of Jim McDonald, makes Duquesne followers more sanguine as regards the Catholic University struggle despite the fact that the Cardinals are rated among the toughest in the East.

U. S. Tennis Stars Advance in Tourney

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, of the United States, won their second round matches of the South Wales tennis championship tournament today before rain halted play.

Ellsworth Vines, Jr., United States and Wimbledon champion, and Keith Gledhill, were prevented from playing.

CLARK, FORMER BUC, DIES

William Clark, former minor and major league baseball star, died at his home in Lawrenceville Sunday. He had been ill for a long time.

Clark broke into the major league with the New York Giants in 1887, and played first base for the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1898 and 1899. He came to the Giants from York in the Pennsylvania League and previously played for Hazelton and Johnstown. A broken arm suffered in 1901 while a member of the Indianapolis team of the American Association ended his playing days.

W. VA. GIVEN NEW PLAYS

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—A new offensive to be tried against Davis and Elkins was given the West Virginia football squad yesterday.

Coach Earle Neale spent considerable time pointing out mistakes of the encounter with Washington and Lee last week. Eck Allen, star quarterback, injured an ankle in the fray and may be unable to compete against Davis-Elkins. Tom Canich will be used if Allen is kept on the sidelines.

Soccer Referee Refuses Kick, Shot in Head

LA PLATA, Argentina, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Leon Arismendi, refereeing a soccer game here yesterday, was shot in the head and critically wounded by Augustin Celadilla, president of the Soccer Football Club, when he refused to allow Celadilla's team a penalty kick.

Tri-State Briefs

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 15.—Despite a gruelling struggle with Bucknell, Coach Hank Day refused his Washington and Jefferson varsity a rest yesterday and gave them a long drill in preparation for their intersectional fray Saturday with Marquette University at Milwaukee, Wis.

LATROBE, Pa., Nov. 15.—With a win over Grove City to their credit, the St. Vincent Bearcats went to work yesterday for their tilt Friday afternoon with Morris-Harvey. The Bearcats are enjoying their greatest season and are figuring on taking the next game and then priming for the final with Davis-Elkins.

Stanford Players Stricken by Flu Attacks

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Five varsity football players were included in a list of 54 Stanford students ill here from influenza. The players are Stan Anderson, fullback; Bob Maentz and Buck Van Dellen, halfback; Red Gribben, tackle, and Ed Ransome, end.

An editorial appeal by the Stanford Daily urged undergraduates to forego campus meetings.

CROWD BOOS KEED'S WIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Kid Chocolate, Havana Negro, received an unpopular decision over Pete Nebo, of Tampa, Fla., in a fast 10-round bout at the St. Nicholas Arena last night. Chocolate weighed 129½ pounds; Nebo, 134¾.

Chocolate took considerable punishment in four of the first five rounds, but staged a closing rally that won him the last five sessions and the decision. The crowd booed heartily when the verdict was announced, although it appeared the Cuban had gained a slight edge by his rally in the latter stages of the bout.

GRANGE FORESEES GREAT FUTURE FOR PRO GRID GAME

RED TO QUIT AS PLAYER THIS YEAR

By HAROLD (RED) GRANGE
(As Told to Bill Collins)
International News Service

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—(INS.)—This is my last year. Fourteen years of football is enough.

You know, Bill, when a fellow gets around 30, he can't take it. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.

And I'd rather quit, feeling that I could still go out there and play good ball, than keep on playing until I am slow, and crippled, and replaced by some young fellow just out of college whose legs are full of spring.

LEGS WEAKENING

Football is just like any other professional sport, when the legs begin to go bad you are through. But football is worse than most sports. For the old underpinnings are bound to go bad sooner when you have a 200-pound tackle tossing all of that 200 pounds at the legs a dozen, two dozen, times every week.

You know, it is a funny thing. When I went down to Illinois I was a basketball player and a track man. There weren't any football players in the fraternity I pledged, and of course they wanted a member on the club. So they made me go out. I strolled over the first day to get a suit, and there were about 200 fellows, twice as big as me, going out.

Well, I just turned around and walked back to the fraternity house. Told the boys I didn't care about football anyway.

There were two big paddles hanging over the fireplace. A couple of seniors took them down, and before I knew it I was out there playing with the freshmen. And I never did play basketball.

I'm not sorry I didn't finish college. I had a tough time. Didn't have any money, was trying to scrape through. And when a chance came to get into the dough I took it. I was just a kid then and all money meant to me was something to spend. But I've got some real estate here and there, and some investments.

PLANS TO COACH

Though I'm quitting the game, I'm quitting as a player only. I've had several coaching offers, and I'm considering several propositions right now.

Of course I couldn't coach in the Big Ten because of the rule barring professional football players. That is a silly ruling. In the East they'd rather have a professional football player as a coach.

Professional football is in its infancy and it is going to be a big thing. Sometimes I wish I'd broken in about 10 years later.

I have an idea it would be a good thing to break up the league into two leagues, an eastern and western division. And then at the end of the season the winners of the two leagues could play a series for the world's championship.

These lads that break in their first year out of college give us a lot of laughs. And as a rule, they are apple pie for the opposing team. The linemen get them mad, fighting mad, and then they lose their heads and can't play ball. I'll never forget when Joe Savoldi broke in with us on Thanksgiving Day. We were playing the Chicago Cardinals. On the first play someone cuffed Jumping Joe. His nose was bleeding and he was mad, wanted to battle the whole Cardinal club.

CARDS KID SAVOLDI

Joe couldn't carry the ball, he couldn't block, and he couldn't do anything. All he thought about was trying to smack somebody. And the madder he got, the more the Cardinals laughed at him.

Finally Ernie Nevers, a swell ball player and a swell fellow, came over and talked to Joe like a father. He said:

"Listen kid, you're just a kid and this is your first game of pro ball. It isn't like college ball. It won't do you any good to get mad. They're just getting your goat and spoiling your playing. Forget about it and play football."

Joe took Nevers' advice and played a whale of a ball game the rest of the afternoon.

It's a great game. And I guess I should know if anyone should. A lot of men have been in it longer than I have, but not many of them as players. I've been bruised, and banged, and crippled, but I still love it.

Knockdown Thrills at Garden

FRANKIE BOJARSKI

SID SILAS — RED BUSH — REFEREE RED ROBINSON

SILAS MASKS ILLS, LOSES

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

One of those stories you read about in boxing fiction occurred in the main bout before a small crowd at Motor Square Garden last night.

The records show that Frankie Bojarski, Erie southpaw, battered his way to a one-sided victory over Sid Sila.., local lightweight. But that's only half of the story. The story behind the story is one of real drama.

Sick for four days and unable to train, because of the weakening effects of an attack of grippe, pale and wan and utterly lacking in strength, Silas was in there fighting for eating money and the wherewithal to pay a doctor to take care of him. Concealing his condition, he fought on nerve alone, took a terrific body and head beating, had an old cut on his left eye reopened, bled from the nose and mouth and took a count of nine from a left to the body in the fifth round.

STICKS TO FINISH

At times, Sid carried the fighting to Bojarski for a punch or two, but that was all. He would go back to circling about the ring, tincanning while waiting for the bell to ring at the end of each painfully long three minutes.

Only his determination and desperation enabled Silas to weather the eight rounds. He was a sick and weak youngster through the closing periods, but he stuck it out, and even had the satisfaction of winning the last round, his only one of the fight, as, the end in sight, he speeded up a bit and forced the going and opened a cut on Bojarski's right eye.

Several weeks ago, in the same ring, Silas had beaten Matty (Popeye) Oldach, stablemate of Bojarski. That night he was stronger than he ever has been in a local ring and punched solidly with both fists. Last night, he was just a shadow of that rugged youngster—an orphan kid fighting for a few dollars when he should have been home in bed under a doctor's care.

THOMAS STOPS CRUZ

But that's the fight game for you, full of heartaches, tough going, raw courage. And not a word of an alibi from Sid, either. The story of his condition came from intimates, and was checked up. Nothing mattered but that the fight must go on, because it represented, not a chance for victory and progress, but a few sadly needed dollars. The kid deserves a hand, and a return bout with Bojarski when he is well again.

The scheduled eight-round semi-final was short-lived, with Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, spilling Juan Cruz, of Mexico, for a count of two in the first round and ripping open his left eye so badly in the second that Cruz asked Referee Joe Zivic to stop the fight, which was done after the doctor examined the injury. Thomas was an easy winner all of the way.

BUSH STOPS WEDZICK

Phil Wedzick, of Erie, subbing for Jimmy Hogan, gave Red Bush, Cumberland middleweight, a good fight for three rounds and then weakened and was floored twice for nine in the fourth round and twice more for the same counts in the fifth before the referee called a halt with five seconds to go in the latter round.

Al Farone, West End featherweight, outboxed Steve Senich, of Homestead, in the six-round second bout, a hard-fought affair, but Senich received the decision to the accompaniment of the howling of the fans.

Frankie Rio, of Farrell, Pa., and Cleveland, subbing on short notice for Johnny Hazel against Harry Fine, looked to be out of condition and made a poor showing, being beaten over the entire route.

PHIL WEDZICK

Silas, although ill, fought through eight bruising rounds with Bojarski in the Motor Square Garden ring last night. He took a count of nine in the fifth round. Wedzick, substituting on short notice against Bush in a feature preliminary, was floored four times for counts of nine before Referee Red Robinson called a halt in the fifth round. STARS BATTLE AT PINEHURST

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The clan of money golfers are primed for the second test of the fall and winter tournament circuit for the mid-South Open, which offers $2,500 prize money.

Leading the vanguard was Horton Smith, who captured first money last week in the opening fall tournament over the Kenwood course at Washington.

The mid-South will be played today and tomorrow over the No. 2 course, counted the most difficult of the Pinehurst courses. As in the past, play will consist of 36 holes of best-ball play today and 36 holes of individual competition tomorrow.

Mike Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., won the individual crown last year with a record-breaking 65-70—135, and will compete again this year. Last year's best-ball play ended in a tie at 131 between the Willie MacFarlane-Wiffy Cox and Herman Barron-Tom Creavy teams.

Besides Smith and Turnesa, the leading entries include Tommy Armour, Bobby Cruickshank, Walter Hagen, Clarence Hackney, Ed Dudley and Alec Watson.

Brown fell in a faint as his hand was raised in victory. He had been in bed for three days and was taken to a hospital after the bout suffering from a high fever.

Maryland Tracks Give Charity $238,000

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The first of the final two days of charity days at Maryland racing tracks yesterday netted approximately $13,000 for the state's unemployment fund.

Today will be the last welfare program and Manager Boyle estimated the second day's pool will be about $15,000 as pari-mutuel clerks and racing officials will donate their services. Approximately $238,000 have been contributed at the race tracks during the past two years at charity day programs for unemployment relief.

Simmons Begins Baseball Training

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—An extra 20 pounds and a burning ambition to regain American League batting honors have caused Al Simmons to start his pre-season training a bit early this year.

Simmons, who will wear a White Sox uniform the coming baseball season, arrived here yesterday with Ralph Shinners, Milwaukee outfielder, for conditioning exercises.

Title Polo Duels Open Saturday

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—A new trophy donated especially by President Justo, of Argentine, will be at stake in the international polo series, opening Saturday, between picked teams representing the United States and the Argentine, but it has not yet been determined whether it will be called the "Cup of the America" or involve championship significance.

It was learned the so-called "Cup of the America," for which the two nations played at Meadow Brook, Long Island, in 1928, did not exist as a perpetual trophy, but was intended as a general name to be given a trophy for each Argentine-United States series.

PORTNEY STOPS MURPHY

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Jack Portney, Baltimore lightweight, registered a knockout victory over Vince Murphy, of Scranton, in the third round of a scheduled eight-round bout last night. BARTELL GIVEN HIGH RATING BY PLAYERS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Pennsylvania, with her Pirate and Quaker offerings, gave the National League its two most interesting baseball clubs this year and in each case the appeal radiated from the center of effervescent youth. George Gibson and Burt Shotton kept their sophomoric entries in the flag race right up to the closing weeks of the season.

Over in Philly, the Scribes and Pharisees are claiming the Quakers as the most youthful club of the Heydler wheel. Pittsburghers may well dispute the contention, although the average age of both clubs is so close that a draw decision would be fair to both sides.

The personality hue given the teams from the Keystone State is largely attributable to the youth involved. The Vaughans and Bartells, the Mallons and Piets, the Kleins and Lees, the Graces and Paddens were magnets to grip the followers of the sport in a year when the poor fellow of the street was out of work and therefore without the means to pay his way into the ball orchards.

QUAKERS KEEN FOR BARTELL

With all respect to the skill of Chuck Klein, Hal Lee, Earl Grace and the other boy wonders, I am constrained to take a special bow in the direction of Dick Bartell and Floyd Vaughan, the two sterling shortfielders whose plays sparkled during the heated campaign.

Quaker fans insist, and with considerable justification, that Bartell was the greatest shortstop in the sport last season. They even place Richard the Lionhearted over his Native Son buddie, Joe Cronin, new pilot of the Senators, in the season's play.

Cronin, it is true, was far beyond Bartell in driving in runs, long hits and punch in general, but Quakertown folks declaim the remarkable fielding merits of Daredevil Dick.

VAUGHAN A YOUNGSTER

The members of the playing profession did not miss the point of comparison as between Bartell and Vaughan. Burt Shotten and his players saw the parallel furnished by Bartell and Vaughan. I believe that Dick was the more valuable of the two young men, inasmuch as his greater experience gave him an advantage which stands out. Many athletes subscribe to this viewpoint.

Vaughan showed a natural tendency to slip when the pressure became pronounced; indeed there were many athletes in the league who felt that Tommy Thevenow should have replaced the fine boy at one or two tough stages of the journey; nevertheless the 20-year-old marvel rated a whole flower store for exemplary service rendered in his first year under the big tent.

CHILLYSAUCE

Pirate Prexy Bill Benswanger, a democratic Republican of the Fourth, Ward, was smiling today over a letter received from Lloyd Waner, who is scarcely any bigger than the boss of the Buccos.

Little Lloyd's note carried considerable optimism. The likeable country kid from Oklahoma has decided to stick to the farm, where he will help "Dad" with the chores. It's a pretty tough assignment to get Lloyd off the farm. He says he feels fine and hopes to be in the pink when he reports for another Pirate campaign.

Well, I see the Cub fans of Chicago are screeching for a southpaw pitcher. Jake May was the only member of the Bruin staff to bother the Yankee gunners, and Jacob, in the National League, hasn't much more chance of getting over than an Ogden Mills speech.

The rub is this: Ruth, Gehrig, Combs, Dickey and Sewell are lefthand batters and therefore were heckled by May, just as a lot of second-string southpaws pile up our lefthand-hitting Pirates.

This little discourse might be offered as a reminder regarding the need of a slugging righthand batter in the Pittsburgh lineup of next year. The team is apt to flounder against southpaws again unless something is done to change our battlefront.

A gent like Fred Lindstrom driving in 100 runs or so would do much to transform the Buccos into a sure-fire flag entry.

FORMER TIGER STAR DEAD

ALTUS, Ark., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The baseball veteran, Charles (Boss) Schmidt, former catcher with the Detroit Tigers, and later manager and coach of several other clubs, who claimed he was the only man who held a complete fistic triumph over Ty Cobb, died yesterday.

As "Boss" whimsically put it:

"I had to lick Ty three times to make him admit it."

Schmidt played in three world series when Hughey Jennings was piloting the Bengals to pennants and when Ty Cobb, now in retirement, rated the reputation of the greatest ball player in the game.

Breaking into organized baseball with Springfield, Ill., in 1901, Schmidt joined the Rock Island (Ill.), club three years later. He then was purchased by Minneapolis, and the Detroit Tigers bought him at the end of his first season.

Later he played with Mobile of the Southern Association; with the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast League, and then went to the Memphis Chicks. He made his managerial debut in 1919 with Sioux City of the Western League.

In 1929, he took an assignment as coach of his old team, the Detroit Tigers, only recently returning to his home at Coal Hill, near Clarksville, Ark.

M'CARTHY BEATEN

HOLYOKE, Mass., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Don (Red) Barry, of Washington, D. C., 197, scored a technical knockout over Jack McCarthy, of Roxbury, 182, in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round feature bout here last night.

GOPHERS DRILL ON ATTACK

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—A snowstorm and cold snap kept Minnesota's gridders indoors yesterday as the first preparation for the Michigan game found the Gophers polishing up their offensive against the Wolverines' style of defense.

Francis (Pug) Lund was laid off duty and underwent another X-ray of a rib injury.

Big Ten Briefs

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The University of Michigan football squad yesterday prepared for its final Western Conference hurdle by studying some new plays handed out by Coach Harry Kipke. In addition to the plays given out, the Wolverines have up their sleeves for use against Minnesota Saturday some tricks which were not employed in the Chicago game last week.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Still weary from their bruising battle at Notre Dame Saturday, Northwestern's regulars were excused from practice yesterday. Coach Dick Hanley said Harry Leeper, Ft. Wayne, Ind., sophomore, will take Pug Rentner's place in the Wildcat backfield. Rentner suffered two fractured ribs Saturday and will be out of the final game of the season, against Iowa this week.

Board to Probe Bass' Difficulties

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The managerial difficulties of Benny Bass, erstwhile featherweight titleholder, who broke off with one boxing manager to sign a five-year contract with another, are under investigation by the State Athletic Commission.

In a bill of complaint filed in a recent suit in which he asked abrogation of his contract with Phil Glassman, his manager at the time, Bass stated Glassman had asked him to "lay down" in several ring encounters.

The suit was settled out of court, but Boxing Commissioner Robert J. Nelson expressed interest in the fighter's declaration that the manager had asked him not to exert his best efforts against ring opponents.

PITT TO SHIFT LINEUP

Schleuter came busting into the Pitt backfield like Eddie Tolan at the tape, he rammed the surprised Mister Weinstock squarely in the tummy and dumped him at Heller's feet. Down went Heller and away went Pitt's biggest scoring chance.

Warner Brothers have provided another city championship trophy, which must be won three times before it becomes the permanent possession of either Pitt, Tech or the Dukes. The Panthers retired a previous Warner Brothers championship emblem last season.

The Tipoff

This chap Ely, captain of the Nebraska eleven and a pip of a defensive player, not only won the admiration of the Panthers for his prowess in diagnosing plays and then stopping 'em, but also for his gentlemanly conduct on the field. During the second period, Miller, paying right halfback for the Huskers, was tackled by Tormey and Heller and knocked out. He fell on the ball as he hit the ground and was knocked out. Ely came running over and shouted at Tormey:

"Hey, you, watch that tackling with a knee!"

"Keep your shirt on. Look how he's laying there. He fell on the ball. I didn't knee him," Tormey replied.

"Sorry, I beg your pardon," was the Nebraska captain's comeback.

Izzy Weinstock, who's been wearing a face mask since having his nozzle cracked up in the Ohio State game, may go into action against Tech without his false-face. His bruised and tender nose apparently is all but healed. Minus the impediment, Izzy should be a more effective fullback.

With all due respect to West Virginia Wesleyan's Bobcats, it wasn't because of their great offensive power that Army made the Cadets drill behind curtains yesterday. Army is looking ahead to the Notre Dame and Navy games.

Eddie Masavage, veteran Penn quarterback, had set his heart on winding up his college career in a blaze of glory against Cornell Thanksgiving Day, but instead he's hobbling around on crutches with only an outside chance of getting into that game.

MANLEY STOPS HANNAH

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—George Manley, Denver lightweight, knocked out Jimmy Hannah, of Pocatello, Ida., in the first round of their scheduled 10-round main event here last night. A straight right to the chin near the end of the round sent Hannah down for a count of six before he was saved by the bell. He was unable to return for the second round. Manley weighed 172, Hannah 168.

COLGATE, BEARS IN LINE FOR COAST BID

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—It isn't generally admitted; in fact, the matter is more or less tacitly ignored by any and all parties concerned. Yet everybody and his maiden aunt seem to know that when Brown and Colgate meet at Providence on Thanksgiving Day, it will be strictly a table-stakes game, on the basis of winner-take-all, including what they think they have reason to believe will be the Rose Bowl junket with Southern California on New Year's Day.

This pair is no more material and commercially-minded than the average college seeking glorified notoriety through a national championship. Neither are they of a mind to spurn the fat guarantee that goes with this ball game, which last year played to 80,000, though times were none too tender.

AUBURN MAY GO

Alabama Poly seems to be on its way to the Southern championship, and, what with one thing and another, including the attractive showmanship of the Notre Dame system, its candidacy would not be without merit if it wasn't for the fact that the Rose Bowl people probably feel that they have had more than their share of Southern teams during recent years.

Alabama has been there twice. The two Georgia teams, Tech and the Bulldogs, each have given the thing a whirl. Tulane was in there last year. Poly, therefore, hasn't too great a chance, even if it wants one.

Anyhow, if the committee thinks Alabama Poly is eliminated, so are Michigan and Purdue by the Big Ten rule against post-season games. So is the inevitable Notre Dame, not only by its Pittsburgh defeat, but by the fact that it plays Southern California in December. So doubtless are Tennessee and Vandy by their tie game. So probably is Pitt by its ties with Ohio State and Nebraska.

TIES UNFAVORABLE

While there is no set rule on the subject, the Rose Bowl procedure on ties is that they count against but not for you.

So it looks like the Colgate-Brown winner, if any. And though it isn't definitely established or even admitted that either is the best team in the East, the fact remains that the committee might look much further and do much worse.

WHALEN STOPPED

HORSE SALES ON

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The first 27 thoroughbreds sold yesterday at the annual Lexington sales brought a total of $5,625. Six horses owned by Marshall Field sold for $2,125, an average of $354.

The breaks of the game often decide the issue. What are the breaks of the game in football?

Everybody understands that a fumbled punt on the 10-yard line recovered by the kicking team would be classified as a break of the game that might allow the winning touchdown. In recent years a number of winning touchdowns have resulted from a forward pass that is slapped or batted by the defensive back into the hands of one of the offensive team.

W. A. Alexander

The officials also contribute to the breaks of the game by poor decisions or faulty mechanics of officiating. Some referees actually have killed the ball by blowing the whistle while the ball carrier was running free with no opponent near at hand. The whistle is, of course, a tackler that never misses.

The strangest breaks, however, that decide games, are those that result from errors by the team in possession of the ball that turn out to the advantage of that team.

ACCIDENTAL HEROES

Often on the fourth down the kicker will fumble the ball and find it impossible to kick it after picking up the ball; so he will start running wide and much to his surprise and that of everyone else, will go on for a touchdown. This play has happened twice this year in big games.

Hitchcock, of Auburn, fumbled a snap from center, picked it up, and raced outside the Tulane end for 75 yards and a touchdown in the Auburn-Tulane game. Grant, of the University of Georgia, duplicated the play on the same day against Vanderbilt University. Several seasons ago Mizell, of Georgia Tech, did the same thing, to decide the issue in a hard-fought battle between Georgia Tech and the University of Alabama.

The reason that this play sometimes goes for a long run is first, that the other team is certain that the ball will be kicked. The defensive linemen therefore rush straight to the kicker to block the supposed kick and are thus all drawn to a point directly in front of the kicker.

NOT GOOD ACTORS

By sheer speed or a quick jump or step to the side the supposed kicker outflanks or gets around all of the onrushing linesmen, and as they are charging in one direction and the runner in an opposite one, all of the defensive linesmen are eliminated from the play. The runner's own linesmen having rushed down field to cover the supposed kick are in excellent position to block the seconary defense men.

Why don't the coaches put this play in their regular list of plays and have the quarterbacks use it on kicking downs? The boys, except in rare instances, are not good enough actors. The players will not or cannot make it look like an intended punt and the defensive linemen therefore do not rush straight in to a point in front of the kicker.

Many of us have tried this play, but cannot make it work except by accident.

N. Y. HARRIER WINS TITLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—George H. Barker, distance star of New York University, yesterday won the annual Intercollegiate Cross-Country championship here in record time. A local school, Manhattan College, captured the team title for the first time in the 33-year history of the meet.

Barker, reaching as a senior the goal he has been striving for since his freshman year, raced over the Van Cortlandt Park course, somewhat under six miles, in 28 minutes 58 4-5 seconds, almost half a minute under the record of 29:26.6 set by Dan Dean, of Pennsylvania, last year.

He finished a full 50 yards in front of an old foe, Joe McCluskey, of Fordham. McCluskey also cracked the old record, finishing in 29 minutes 8 seconds.

Other varsity teams finished in this order: New York University, 115 points; Michigan State, 125; Penn State, 128; Harvard, 130; Cornell, 208; Maine, 217; Yale, 243; Pittsburgh, 277; Princeton, 303; Columbia, 319; Dartmouth, 325; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 333, and Fordham, 376.

Blackhawks Sued For Contract Breach

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The threatened $150,000 breach of contract suit against the Chicago National League Hockey Club and its president, Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, on behalf of the Chicago Stadium Corporation, will be filed Friday, Sidney N. Strotz, president of the Stadium Corporation, said today.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

By GIB MARSH

In another two weeks the hunters of Pennsylvania will park their shotguns and take down their rifles in preparation for the deer-shooting session of the Keystone State. At sundown on November 30, the small-game hunting season will close and at sunrise on December 1 the deer-hunting season will open. And what a surprise is in store for the legal bucks on the morn of December 1, for it is anticipated there will be nearly 300,000 red-coated hunters in the mountains.

There is much speculation about this deer season, for only legal bucks, or bucks having two or more points on their antlers, will be the quarry for the hunters. Last year, it was an open season on both legal-sized bucks and does, the latter weighing more than 60 pounds. And the kill was estimated by the game commission as 93,000, a kill likely never surpassed in any state. However, it is contended that with the illegal kills, such as buttton-horned bucks and small does, more than 100,000 deer were slain, many left by the careless hunters to waste in the woods, which was a wanton destruction.

EXPECT 20,000 KILL

Observations by game wardens and surveys made by the Game Commission, indicate there will be 20,000 legal bucks killed during the two weeks of the deer season. Already the members of various hunting clubs are preparing their quarters in the mountains for the big-game season. And, while the deer herds were thinned out in some sections of the state, it is expected the enormous number of hunters will have no trouble routing 20,000 legal bucks when the driving crews start combing the mountains.

Last year, the open season attracted many novice big-game hunters to the mountains. Many of these men were unfamiliar with the forests, the use of high-powered rifles, which resulted in many fatal accidents, and the killing of deer of illegal size and age. To thousands of these green hunters antlerless deer included the small button-horned bucks, and even spike bucks and fawn does. This season the hunters will have to exercise caution, for only the bucks with bracketed antlers will be legal.

RAIDERS SPORT FINE RECORD

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Colgate's Red Raiders, if they can hurdle the formidable Brown Bear on Thanksgiving Day in the climax football game for the only two remaining undefeated, untied Eastern teams, have a rare opportunity to finish the season with a spotless defensive record as well as in a blaze of championship glory.

No major team in the country, within the past 10 years, has escaped without being scored on at least once. Colgate now is the only big college outfit remaining with an unblemished defensive record. Southern California kept up the pace until yielding to California the only touchdown tallied so far against the Trojans.

'88 ELIS GREAT

To discover anything like an impressive stretch of peerless defensive play, it is necessary to go back to the halcyon days, long before the open game broke down ancient defensive barriers. Back in 1888, W. H. (Pa) Corbin's Yale team, considered one of the greatest of all time, held its opponents absolutely scoreless in 13 games while rolling up 690 points. Michigan's 1901 aggregation, the first of four successive unbeaten Wolverine combinations, ran up 550 points to none for the enemy.

St. Mary's, of California, in 1929, came closest to a perfect defensive record in recent years, going through seven straight games without yielding a point, only to have a six scored against it while putting the University of Oregon to rout in the last game of the season.

Michigan's 1925 goal line was uncrossed but the Wolverines lost their only game of the season to Northwestern on a field goal.

SOUTHERN TEAMS STRONG

Southern teams have posted the best defensive records among the unbeaten aggregations in the last two years. Alabama's all-conquering 1930 array yielded only 13 points in 10 games, including the Rose Bowl classic, and the 1931 Tennessee team permitted only 15 points in 10 games.

Alabama's 1925 team and California's 1923 Golden Bears each yielded only seven points in nine games.

Vanderbilt Breaks With Tulane U.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Russ Cohen, member of the Vanderbilt coaching staff, and former head football coach at Louisiana State University, announced last night that Vanderbilt had severed athletic relations with Tulane and that L. S. U. would replace Tulane on future Commodore schedules.

The booing to which Vanderbilt coaches and players were subjected when the Commodores played Tulane in New Orleans this fall in a game that ended in a 6-6 deadlock, and the insistence by Tulane officials that the Commodores return to New Orleans for any future games, were given by Cohen as the reasons for the action.

U. S. Army Riders Keep World Title

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Faltering only once in three separate journeys over the intricate international course, the United States Army show team, led by Maj. Tupper Cole, last night turned back the bid of three nations to win the International Military Jumping championship for the second consecutive year at the National Horse Show.

EAGLES HOPE TO DEFEAT ROONEYS

By TOM BIRKS

The Bellaire Eagles will appear in Pittsburgh for the first time next Sunday, when Andy Vusky's eleven clashes with the undefeated Rooneys at Greenlee Field.

Two weeks ago the Rooneys and Eagles met in one of the most torrid battles ever staged in the Wheeling sector. Neither club was satisfied with the result.

The Eagles felt they should have won by two touchdowns. The Rooneys had one disallowed by the officials. But it was a great fight, and the Eagles will be out for revenge this week.

While the Rooneys and Bellaire are fighting it out here the East Liberty Papales will meet the McKeesport Olympics at Olympia Park. Charley Papale, owner of the East End club, wants his club to finish in second place, and will have to beat the Olympics to turn the trick.

The East Liberty team has lost only two games, both Conference tilts, to the Rooneys.

Tomorrow night the Etna Sycamores and Rox Rangers play at Greenlee Field. Both clubs are eager to win this outstanding lightweight battle. A defeat for either club will hurt their championship chances. A great battle should result.

CRIMSON GETS LONG DRILL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The Harvard team started its final drive for the objective Yale game with a slightly changed backfield. Arthur Barrett occupied the right halfback berth.

Charley Nevin, still suffering from a sprain, worked out lightly. The team was put through blocking and tackling drills, a long offense dummy scrimmage and an on-contact stand against the Yale method of attack.

Eastern Briefs

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Instead of an expected holiday, Yale yesterday was called upon to go through a snappy drill in preparation for the Harvard contest. Joe Crowley was back at his regular post at right halfback, replacing Andy Callan, slightly injured in the Princeton game.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Andy Kerr has deferred the start of Colgate practice for the Hobart game until Monday. Every player came through the Syracuse game uninjured.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The Holy Cross Crusaders, determined to return to the victory road after successive defeats by Brown and Harvard, yesterday engaged in their hardest drill of the season. Bunny Corcoran, the new coach, stressed blocking in the two-hour session and kept the entire squad moving at top speed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Columbia emerged from the wrestling game with Brown in excellent shape and will be at full strength for the closing game with Syracuse, Lou Little, expecting the Orange to be tough, sent his charges through a long workout yesterday featured by dummy scrimmage.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Although Army worked out for 45 minutes yesterday, the session was conducted behind curtains and coaches declined to disclose what took place.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Cornell, aiming at the Thanksgiving Day battle with Penn, went through a light signal drill yesterday after hearing a lecture from Coach Gil Dobie. Jerry Brock and Bart Vivisano suffered minor injuries in the Dartmouth game, but will be in shape for Penn.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—For the first time since the campaign opened, New York University was given a complete holiday yesterday. The Violets will begin work today in preparation for the Thanksgiving Day game with Carnegie Tech.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Penn was given a holiday yesterday, but Harvey Harman found occasion to remark that his team's play against Ohio State indicated some changes might be necessary before the Cornell fray.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Temple and Villanova drilled assiduously yesterday for their meeting Saturday. Villanova worked against a scrub team which used Temple plays. Temple practiced on a defense against forward passes.

Knee Injury May End Hamas' Career

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—A knee injury threatens to end the boxing career of Steve Hamas, promising young heavyweight from New Jersey.

Hamas wrenched ligaments in his knee several months ago and spent six weeks in the hospital. An operation was performed but the injury failed to respond to treatment.

Forced to the fistic sidelines, Hamas has returned to his first athletic love, football. A star at Penn State, he now is coaching Montauk High School's eleven.

WALL STREET AGAIN BUSY WITH CHARTS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Wall street these days has been paying an unusual amount of attention to chart reading.

This, I believe, is largely ascribable to the fact that operations in the stock market in recent weeks have been conducted mainly by sophisticates. Since Wall street has been trying to make a meager living by doing one another's washing, it is but natural that attention should be focussed on the technique of professional trading.

Mr. Rukeyser

In spite of this concentration on eighth-snatching, perhaps the large profits will be made by none too subtle outsiders, who buy for cash the shares of America's leading and most promising corporations at depression prices and who are willing to wait naively for the looming of a better day in the nation's business.

THE DEBT RATIO VIOLATED

All yardsticks as to a safe ratio of debt have been broken in the last three years. Usually a debt of 10 per cent of net worth has been considered ultra-conservative, yet there have been instances of men, who were in debt only to this extent, being wiped out during the economic tornado.

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, economic soothsayer for the Cleveland Trust Company, is of the opinion that the tendency of businessmen during the political campaign to focus attenttion on politics slowed up the rate of economic recovery.

CREDIT POLICY HIT

J. D. Edwards, thoughtful Cincinnati investment dealer, commenting on a recent discussion in this column of the efforts by Senator Glass and others to prevent the flow of federal reserve credit into speculative channels, writes me:

"Of course, you cannot separate credit into two compartments, one for speculation and one for business, but you can separate credit into two compartment, one marked sound credits and one marked unsound credits. The $8,500,000,000 of brokers' loans, as of 1929, were in the compartment marked unsound credits because every sound principle of granting credit for speculation, as it existed in 1927 to 1929, was violated and when you violate sound principles of granting credit, you pay the bill, and the bill is written in billions of dollars since the direct and indirect losses from the speculative debacle are inconceivable, not to mention human suffering."

In continuing his indictment, Mr. Edwards asserts that six sound principles of granting speculative credit were violated, namely, encouraging inexperienced people to risk their savings in the form of margin; secondly, brokers advanced credit to these amateur traders without investigating their financial standing; thirdly, brokers' loans are not self-liquidating; fourth, collateral against loans constituted a constant threat to prices; fifth, brokers' loans could not be liquidated without selling undigested securities in a manner which would start or accentuate a panic, and sixth, credit can survive only through constructive uses, but when credit is used for unintelligent and amateurish speculation, it becomes destructive.

Output in the United States during October was 76,731 tons as against 70,621 tons in September and 97,117 in October, 1931.

Forbes

This Inspiring Inflation Has Already Begun

By B. C. FORBES

AMERICA, WITHOUT knowing it, already has begun to experience encouraging monetary inflation. It has become pronounced only in one direction, but that direction is the logical one.

Mr. Forbes

What else but monetary inflation does it mean when the United States government can obtain short-term funds at an annual interest charge one-eighth and one-quarter of one per cent?

This clearly reflects the presence of an extraordinary super-abundance of funds available for ultra-safe investments. It means that large banking institutions are glutted with idle funds. It is the result of the unprecedented liquidity of large-city banks.

The excess of reserves carried today by members of the Federal Reserve System has reached a total of large-city banks.

The excess of reserves carried today by members of the Federal Reserve System has reached a total of $480,000,000.

Mounting excess bank reserves in the past have invariably inspired, first, buying of the very safest of investment obligations; when returns on such investments have fallen to inordinately low levels, the investment demand spread to the next-highest grade of securities.

From government and municipal bonds, the call proverbially spreads to high-grade railway, utility and industrial bonds, then to less gilt-edged issues, then, in turn, to ordinary bonds, choice preferred stocks, good common stocks and, finally, to A. O. T., meaning any old thing. The phenomenally high prices now being bid for Treasury obligations marks the first step along this historic path.

Please understand that the current competition for the safest of all safe American investments does not mirror returning confidence. It mirrors, rather, the determination of financial institutions to play absolutely safe.

But it also mirrors pressure to find outlets for millions upon millions of idle dollars. Banks cannot long afford to store mountains of idle dollars—dollars and banks must earn their keep.

We may safely assume that monetary deflation has already been carried so far that it has become uncomfortable and unprofitable to banks, and that the harnessing of idle dollars has begun. That the process will spread, all financial history tells.

SHRIVELED-UP prices and shiveled-up business have made it painfully difficult, in many instances impossible, for debtors to pay off obligations incurred when prices were higher, business booming, dollars more plentiful and less valuable.

Because cash has become worth more is one reason adduced by our war debtors for wanting us to scale down drastically the amounts demanded in repayment.

One reader, Edward E. Meyer, points out, in a communication to this column, that our foreign debtors are not the only ones confronted with this problem:

"With falling prices carried to present extremes, it is virtually impossible to pay important long-term debts, incurred in cheap dollars, without destroying the debtor and impairing the social and financial security of the creditor. This, however, is true of all long-term debts whether domestic or foreign.

"If we are called upon to save debtors, as good Americans and good business people our first obligation along these lines is to save American debtors first! They at least contribute to the upkeep of our government and are definite customers for the products of our labor and industry to be conveniently reached without hurdling difficult, sometimes impossible tariffs.

"Outstanding foreign debts, important as they are, represent less than 10 per cent of our domestic long-term debts, all of which are in real jeopardy. It behooves us, therefore, not to give the former prior attention.

"'Save American long-term debtors first!' should be our slogan."

This consideration is respectfully commended to the attention of Messrs. Hoover and Roosevelt and other politicians charged with the responsibility of dealing with the overtures pouring in from Britain, France and other foreign debtors.

Syndicate Offers Milwaukee Bonds

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Chase, Harris, Forbes Corporation and associates were awarded $1,000,000 Milwaukee County (Wis.) bonds, due 1933-42, on a bid of 98.15 for 4s. They are being reoffered to yield 2.25 to 4.20 per cent.

Business

Ayres Declares July Marked Low Point Of Depression

JULY PROBABLY saw the low point of the depression in the opinion of Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Company.

In his latest monthly bulletin of business conditions, Col. Ayres declares that the volume of industrial production increased sharply from the end of August to the end of September. In August it was 49.5 per cent below the computed normal level and in September it was only 44.6 per cent below normal.

This increase of nearly 10 per cent is greater than any previous increase in any one month in which Col. Ayres has a record. He says:

"Almost every important element in the index showed advances from August to September. In manufacturing output there were especially noteworthy increases in iron and steel, textiles, food products, leather and shoes, cement and tobacco. In mining the largest advances were those in the output of coal, with the percentage increases in anthracite exceeding the important improvement in bituminous production. There were slight decreases in the production of zinc and silver."

* * *

July Reached Depression Low

COL. AYRES declares that it now seems probable that the July record of 51.1 per cent below normal will prove to be the lowest record of this depression. Previous low records for earlier great depressions include those of 27.0 per cent below in 1921, a record of 18.1 below in 1908, one of 19.9 below in 1894, one of 19.1 below in 1843, and one of 22.0 below in the Embargo depression of 1808. The severity of this depression as measured by curtailment of industrial production has been extreme.

An unusual inventory situation is found in Col. Ayres' survey. The warehouse stocks of raw materials in this country are now far greater in volume than they were when the depression began, while those of manufactured goods are so low as to be somewhat subnormal.

In commenting on stocks of raw material, Col. Ayres says:

"There was a moderate increase in 1926, and a sharp one beginning in 1929 and continuing up to the present time. This advance has carried the stocks of raw materials more than 70 per cent above their 1923-1925 averages. These conditions would seem to indicate that the proposed shorter working week, and shorter day should be put into effect among our farmers and oil drillers and miners rather than among the factory workers."

Bank in Position To Extend Credit

FOLLOWING THE LIQUIDATION in security prices and the rapid declines in the level of business activity the need for funds declined and the borrowings from the Federal Reserve Banks fell to less than $200,000,000. Late in 1931, however, Col Ayres points out, the banks were forced once more to borrow to meet the demands from depositors for funds either to hoard or to export in the form of gold. This caused a sharp increase in the borrowings from Reserve Banks which reached a peak of about $850,000,000 last February. At that time almost two-fifths of the reserves held by member banks consisted of funds borrowed from the Reserve Banks. Col. Ayres says:

"Since that crisis period funds have been steadily flowing back to the member banks, and this has enabled them to pay down their borrowings from the Reserve Banks, and to increase their own reserves. The borrowed funds are now down to less than 400 millions, and the excess reserves are up to almost 500 millions. For the first time in this depression the banks are in a position to pursue a policy of credit expansion, and their excess reserves constitute a potent influence in that direction."

SHIP OHIO COAL BY RIVER, RAIL

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—Forty-eight hours after leaving Nemacolin, Pa., on six barges, 5,000 tons of coal arrived here in railroad cars last night. It was the first combination water-rail shipment of coal from the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company's coal mines at Nemacolin to its plant here.

The six barges were towed for 25 hours on the Monongahela and Ohio rivers to Colona, where the coal was transferred to the railroad cars of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad.

The entire trip took about the same time required for all-rail shipment. Officials of the company said the saving in freight was about 23 cents a ton, which, figuring the volume used by the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, would aggregate between $750,000 and $1,000,000 a year.

Union Trust Asks Gas Bond Tenders

The Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, trustee of Koppers Gas and Coke Company sinking fund 5½ per cent debenture gold bonds, dated July 1, 1929, will receive tenders before noon November 18, 1932, for the sale to it of such bonds not exceeding in the aggregate $1,000,211 at prices less than 103½ and accrued interest. RALLY CHECKS STOCK PRICE DECLINE

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The stock market managed to dig in its heels today and check the rather sharp skid of the previous session.

Prices slipped a little more in the early trading, but selling soon dried up, and by early afternoon several of the leaders had rallied to show gains of from fractions to a point. A firm wheat market was helpful.

The number of impending dividend actions evidently made traders hesitant, although the principal one of the week, American Telephone's, tomorrow, was expected in usually well informed quarters to bring another regular quarterly payment of $2.25 a share, although there was some uncertainty about it. What is, of course, more important than dividends, is corporate earnings. The ordering of dividend disbursements not fully earned appears to have lost its erstwhile salutary effect upon the market.

Weakness of Drug, Inc., evidently reflected the filing of a petition for a receiver for Louis K. Liggett Company, although it has been known for weeks that reorganization was contemplated, if more favorable rentals were not granted under present leases. The oil shares held to a narrow range. While Standard of New York advanced gasoline prices, preliminary estimates indicated a sizeable increase in crude production last week. The production problem, however, has become decidedly less threatening, with the enactment of a new proration law in Texas.

An item of interest bearing on the international financial situation was Germany's report of its foreign trade for October, showing an excess of exports over imports of 84,000,000 marks, unchanged from September. The export surplus for October of last year, however, amounted to 383,000,000 marks. The sharp shrinkage in the Reich's favorable balance of trade has complicated its problem of maintaining payments on external debt.

A Story of the Conflicting Natures Of Different Generations

School Friend of Husband Becomes Interested In Elizabeth

CHAPTER XXIII.

Someone else wondered, had been wondering for some time, Fred Van Alstyne. He wondered, distressfully . . . would Elizabeth remarry?

When had he first fallen in love with his friend's widow? He could not have said—he had never forgotten that glimpse of her, leaning from the carriage that brought her home from the church. It had pierced his heart, an authentic pang of beauty. But it hadn't happened then, he thought. Perhaps, after she came back from England with the child. He had called at the house, had seen her drifting silently about the great rooms, a pale girl in a black frock. She did not wear black now and her clear pallor was sometimes faintly stained with pink. But he always saw her, in his heart, as that stricken, uncomplaining figure.

He'd loved Lennox Sheldon—now he loved Lennox Sheldon's young widow. He thought Lennox would be glad, if he knew.

And Elizabeth?

He did not see her alone, often. Almost always the old woman was there—the witch, he termed her. He had never liked her. He was a young man with a rather ponderous but sound turn of mind. He hadn't needed much imagination to see what she'd done to Lennox.

He might have pointed out to Elizabeth that she was free to come and go as she pleased—a married woman with a child—no girl to be chaperoned and guarded and followed up. Yet somehow he did not suggest this.

LONGS FOR HER

He had no belief in the Ruth and Naomi legend. He knew, he thought he knew, that Elizabeth was afraid of her mother-in-law. He thought he could explain that—her youth when she had come to the Sheldon household, her years of being dominated, her tragedy, her financial dependence. He wanted to take her in his arms and say, "You need never be afraid any more."

He wanted, dreadfully, to teach her the ways of laughter. It seemed to him that she never laughed, not really. He wanted to awaken her to life. She was a statue, walking.

They had always been good friends, in a quiet sort of way.

Seven years—eight years—and then suddenly it was ten years and the Sheldons were back in the hideous, comfortable Connecticut house and people were making speeches in the town hall and working with the Red Cross, and half a dozen men from the summer colony had vanished; some were driving ambulances and some were flying with the R. F. C.

Joyce bounded into her grandmother's room.

"If I were grown up—and a doctor—I could go to France!"

LITTLE DOCTOR

She had a private hospital in the disused barn. There she tended an assortment of patients, broken-limbed dolls, stray dogs, a sparrow with a hurt wing. She had, at ten, the hands of the healer.

This was in 1916.

Elizabeth thought, pushing the morning papers aside. I can't get used to it—two years—all those boys—killed—mangled—dying——

"Why don't you go, mother?" Joyce asked her once.

"Where?"

"To France, and nurse. Mrs. Elder has, and Miss Howells."

Elizabeth shook her head. Mrs. Sheldon remarked, pouring the tea, "Your mother has had no training, Joyce."

"She could learn."

Mrs. Sheldon smiled, slightly. Elizabeth said nothing, fingering the paper again, distastefully. Joyce thought—oh, she hates blood. She fainted that day I cut my hand—she isn't like me and Granny.

Contempt for her mother stirred in her heart. She turned to her grandmother, demanded abruptly, confidently, "You go!"

Mrs. Sheldon answered, it seemed, regretfully.

"I'm too old, my dear."

Her tone seemed to add, with understanding—and you're too young.

EAGER TO HELP

Joyce looked at her in amazement. Old? Why, of course she was old. But somehow it had never before occurred to the child.

Mrs. Sheldon rose.

"I am going down to the Red Cross rooms. Would you care to come with me, Joyce?"

"Oh, Granny!"

The blue eyes shone. Of course they wouldn't let her help, but she could sit there in that atmosphere of gauze and unbleached muslin and oakum, and watch. Perhaps, if she were very good, they'd let her do something, a very little. Granny had shown her how to make those little sponges. You turned them inside out like a glove.

After luncheon they set off in the car, the two of them, sitting there, straight backed, absorbed in one another. Elizabeth turned from the window.

After a time she went out into the garden. She had been permitted some freedom there. She might give orders to the gardener, might cut the flowers, might arrange them in baskets and vases. Mrs. Sheldon was pleased to allow her daughter-in-law such small, unimportant, decorative duties.

Day in, day out, month and year. Her own mother dead, her sisters married and away, Alice in the West with her university professor, Fanny in South America with her engineer.

No one belonged to her any more.

She heard a car come up the drive. Some one for Cousin Louisa. Tired, a little warm, she went deep into the garden and sat down upon the long, rustic bench, under an arbor of cool, shining grape vines. She laid the flowers she had gathered beside her in their flat basket, stripped off her gloves.

ASKED TO DANCE

"They told me I'd find you here!"

"Fred!"

"None other—"

He sat down beside her, big, solid, almost as blonde as she.

"Are you going to the Country Club tonight?"

She looked at him in amazement.

"But I never—"

"Oh, I know—you never," he interrupted, laughing. "Come, why not? It will do you good."

He could not add, "Ten years is a long time, Elizabeth."

She looked at him a moment, silently. To—dance? To hear music that meant something personal—not just to listen, an outsider. To laugh, to forget, a very little?

"But I don't know the new dances, Fred. It's so long——"

"Too long," he replied, steadily, his mouth a little hard under the small, blonde mustache, "far too long. And the dances don't matter an atom. You'd catch on in a second. Oh, do come."

IS DEPRESSED

After a moment, she nodded. He could almost see the struggle that had gone on in her mind before she made the surrendering gesture.

"I'll call for you," he told her.

He was careful to keep the triumph from his voice. He was careful not to move nearer to her. He put his brown hands in his pockets and whistled, a little. Must keep them in his pockets, you understand, she was so close—her hand just touching the flowers there.

After he had left her she went to her room and searched feverishly through her wardrobe.

That frock might do. It had been bought for Cousin Louisa's dinner to the Belgian Relief Committee people, last spring. A straight gold slip, with a girdle of tarnished metal, and one improbable, heavenly, deep blue rose.

Louisa and Joyce came home long after she had had her solitary cup of tea at four. Elizabeth followed her mother-in-law to her room and spoke, not quite steadily.

"I—Fred Van Alstyne was here——"

"Yes?"

"He asked me to go to the Country Club with him tonight and I accepted," explained Elizabeth, in a little rush.

Mrs. Sheldon raised her eyebrows and said nothing.

"You don't mind?" Elizabeth asked.

"Why should I?"

That was all. As easy as that. Yet she went back to her room, depressed. She would telephone him. She wouldn't go. Yes, she would go. How old was she, now?—31? Old enough, surely young enough.

She sat down on the foot of her bed and looked straight ahead of her.

Synopsis

Mrs. Louisa Sheldon idolized her son, Lennox, who died from pneumonia a few days after his marriage to Elizabeth, originally picked by his mother as an ideal wife. Before her idol's death, Mrs. Sheldon had been shocked to learn that he and Elizabeth had plotted to marry before the time which she (Louisa) had stipulated. She forgave her boy—but never Elizabeth—for that. Louisa went abroad with Elizabeth soon after the latter became a widow. In England, Elizabeth's daughter, Joyce, was born and, as years pass and the family is back in New York, the child becomes more and more the image of her father. Louisa moves to mould Joyce just as she did Lennox. Joyce is now 7, and quite a tomboy. Friends begin to wonder if Elizabeth will marry again.

Now Go On

"I— Fred Van Alstyne was here—" said Elizabeth.

She was young—young. She had, perhaps, 40 more years of life. To live them all as the last 10 years had been lived? No, that was not possible.

Earlier, she had sometimes thought—but she'll die one day, and then we'll be alone, Joyce and I. But then the thought had seemed fantasy, absurd. Die, that erect old woman? Never! She, Elizabeth, would die first.

When she thought that, she was glad. She'd have Lennox for a little while before his mother came. She'd tell him, she'd make it clear, she'd make him see the fear and the smothering and the wickedness.

But perhaps he knew, had known all along. If he had, why hadn't he made a sign, why hadn't he helped her?

Ten years, and Lennox was growing a little dim in her memory, almost as if she had dreamed him. She could remember vividly only the dreadful things—the moment when he had faced his mother—the other moment outside his door, beating on the panels like a mad woman.

But of love, tangible love, she had so little remembrance. Sometimes, at night, she would close her eyes and try to remember—kiss and clasp. But it had been so brief, it was so long since, the dreadful things had so closely followed it, submerged it.

And now?

She liked Fred Van Alstyne. She had always liked him. He knew how to be silent with her. He was a friend. Yet lately it had seemed to her that he had looked at her, not as a friend looks, not with cool, measured affection. Oh, she'd seen that look before—in the eyes of the young Italian who'd had letters to Mrs. Sheldon, in the eyes of Meredith Cochran, three years ago.

But something had always happened, come between. She hadn't seen the Roman more than four or five times, and Meredith had married last year.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

EXTRA! EXTRA! SANTA CLAUS IS ON HIS WAY TO PITTSBURGH!

Yes, boys and girls, the secretary of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club received a telegram from dear old Santa yesterday from his home at the North Pole. He said:

"Tell all the members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club that I am coming to Pittsburgh next Saturday and will attend all the regular meetings of the Komic Club on that day, and that I'll be at all of the meetings from now until Christmas. Here's what I want every boy and girl who is a member of the club to do: When they come to see me next Saturday I want them to bring with them an empty stocking. Have them sew their name and address on it so that I'll know which is which, and every time they attend one of the Junior Komic Club meetings on Saturday morning between now and Christmas I'll put something in their stocking. Then on Christmas Eve, December 24, at the meetings I'll distribute to each member who has brought a stocking, a stocking full of toys, fruit, candy and nuts."

So boys and girls, all you'll have to do to get a stocking full of toys from Santa is to attend the meetings of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club each week. That's easy, isn't it?

At the Arsenal last week the meeting was opened by the members singing several popular songs accompanied by Charles Mathews at the piano. Josh Dreano, who proved so popular last week as master of ceremonies, again took charge and introduced the following acts.

ARSENAL PROGRAM

Little Betty Richards, that clever entertainer, offered first an old-fashioned song and dance which proved very popular with the youngsters. Betty is a great favorite with the members of the Arsenal Chapter and every time she appears on the stage gets a big round of applause. Grace Moffat then offered several songs of the more popular variety, singing "Mimi" and "Say It Isn't So." Grace requested the members to join with her in singing the second song and the children needed no urging.

The Evans sisters harmonized several of the most popular "blues" numbers and finished with a bit of soft shoe dancing. Jack Lamont with his imitations of the various animals found on the farm, caused much laughter and for an encore he offered a monologue which went over very big.

The highlight of the program, however, was Arthur Belmont. Arthur calls himself the human seal, and boys and girls the way he juggles different articles on his nose, just like the seals in the circus, proves his claim. The trick that amused the youngsters most Saturday was when Arthur took a bowl of gold fish, balanced it on a pole and then raised the pole high in the air, finally balancing pole, bowl and goldfish on his nose. This brought howls of delight from the members, and after Arthur had finished his act the members invited him to return and perform for them at their meeting this Saturday. This he promised to do, and the members then let him go. For a while, however, Manager Eddie Johns thought that he would have to eat the goldfish to get the youngsters quiet so he could go on with the show.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

Bugs Back With Animal Film

We just got back from our weekend trip to darkest Africa and report the following episodes for lovers of wild animal life.

We got 3,000 feet of monkeys at play. Swinging by their feet and juggling coconuts.

We had to sacrifice the close-ups of the morose lions when they started necking with the explorer. We got a fine picture of an ostrich egg in a sandstorm and a hippo dashing up the river bank like the Albany night boat.

The fight between the water buffalo and the tiger was postponed. They're under contract to M. G. M.

The competition is so keen that the big movie companies are stealing leopards from each other. But we were very fortunate in securing the only picture ever made of a goat chasing a puma. The goat doesn't know the real reason for his victory because even his best animal friends won't tell him.

The big feature of the film is an African magootra sunning himself in a mushroom cave. These fierce animals have long necks, short legs and are willing to play opposite Jimmy Cagney. They can take it.

When we emerged on the reproduction side of the impenetrable jungle we got the following message from Greta Garbo:

"Bugs, I congratulate you on your magnificent feat."

Well, we congratulate Greta on hers.

The film will be shown for the first time tomorrow. World premiere at the old carbarn. Just stay on the car and get everything for a straight fare.

Everything in this film is real. Especially the fight between the supervisor and the fleas.

The struggle to the finish between the wild animals is so vicious we advise you to stay in the balcony. When these animals see their names in electric lights they don't know friend from foe. Next week, Mickey Mouse.

Something to Do

Repeal of the Blue Law Will Pave the Way for Wholesome Activities on Sunday.

Describing a Sunday afternoon in a Pittsburgh home, Elizabeth Moorhead (Mrs. E. M. Vermorcken, instructor in English at Carnegie Tech), says in her novel, "Clouded Hills":

"The men ate too much; heavy with food, they would lounge in the sitting room after dinner, smoking and talking business until they dropped into a state of coma in their chairs. There was nothing else to do."

Not a very inspiring picture, yet characteristic not only of the middle-class family of the bygone generation of whom Mrs. Vermorcken wrote, but also of many a Pittsburgh family of today. The city on Sunday afternoon offers little to attract the men—or, for that matter, the women, either—and so they fritter the holiday away in gossip and smoking and dozing.

We hail a new organization which has just been formed in Pennsylvania to combat this evil and provide interesting and wholesome recreation for Sunday afternoons. It is called "the Pennsylvania Association to Encourage and Regulate Sunday Sports," and numbers among its members scores of prominent sportsmen, professional and businessmen in all parts of the state. J. Frederick Byers, of Pittsburgh, is one of the vice presidents.

The new organization seeks to obtain for the people of Pennsylvania the legal right to play and watch football, baseball, basketball and other popular games on Sunday.

This can be accomplished, of course, only by repeal or radical modification of the Blue Law of 1794.

The law is now ignored in many Pennsylvania communities. Erie, for example, has had Sunday baseball and Sunday movies for several years. The law has become so distasteful throughout the state that it seems certain that unless the Legislature acts it will be nullified in every large community by popular disobedience and police non-enforcement.

Nullification of this sort has ugly possibilities as a breeder of contempt for law in general. As Councilman William W. Roper, of Philadelphia, former Princeton football coach, and president of the new organization, says, there is too much flouting of the law in this country and it is a mistake to have our boys and girls playing their games or watching others in athletic competition with the thought in the back of their minds that they are lawbreakers.

Happily there is a good prospect that the Legislature will repeal the obnoxious law at its forthcoming session. Nevertheless there should be no relaxation in missionary work. Gov. Gifford Pinchot's attitude on the matter is none too encouraging. He may veto the repeal measure.

The forces that are striving for a wholesome and cheerful Sunday should get busy with the newly elected members of the Legislature, particularly the rural members, and keep busy until the desired legislation is enacted.

Interstate Auto Traffic

Need of Federal Regulation Is Seen in the Controversy Between Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Congress at the short session will have ample time to provide effective federal regulation for all motor vehicles engaged in interstate traffic.

New evidence of the need for this regulation is afforded by the controversy that has arisen between the states of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Pennsylvania recently passed a law requiring the registration of all motor trucks from outside that state operating in that state for hire. The purpose of this law was to raise revenue to reimburse Pennsylvania for the wear and tear of heavy trucks on its highways.

New Jersey promptly retaliated by refusing entrance into the state of every Pennsylvania truck unless the latter also bore a New Jersey license.

Although a truce between these two states has been declared, a similar controversy may develop in other sections of the country between different states unless the federal government provides federal regulation of all motor vehicles engaged in commerce between the states.

Various bills for this purpose are pending before the Congress. Committees for both houses have held voluminous hearings on these measures, but no statute has yet been written.

The Interstate Commerce Commission strongly recommends that the federal government, as a protection to the public and in justice to the railroads, regulate interstate commerce by motor carrier as effectively as it does interstate commerce by the railroads.

Prof. William Z. Ripley, of Harvard University, an eminent authority on transportation problems, puts the case for federal regulation of all agencies engaged in interstate traffic when he says:

"As highways, waterways and rails must coexist, does not the task reduce itself to a wise apportionment of the national transportation load among these agencies? At the moment there is neither law nor order in the process. If we press on blindly, chaos certainly will ensue."

A national transportation committee of which Calvin Coolidge is chairman is now studying the whole problem of national transportation. But Congress should not await the completion of this study to extend the regulatory powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission to motor vehicles engaged in interstate commerce.

Protection to the public, justice to the railroads and the needs of the traveling and shipping public require that Congress act promptly in this vital matter. Democrats and Republicans should unite at the short session in the discharge of this federal responsibility.

An Outrageous System

The Taxpayers Have Been Mulcted Out of Vast Sums by Unscrupulous Squires and Constables.

The more one delves into the county audit records dealing with payments to justices of the peace and constables the more outrageous appears the system under which these officials collect fees for handling abortive criminal cases.

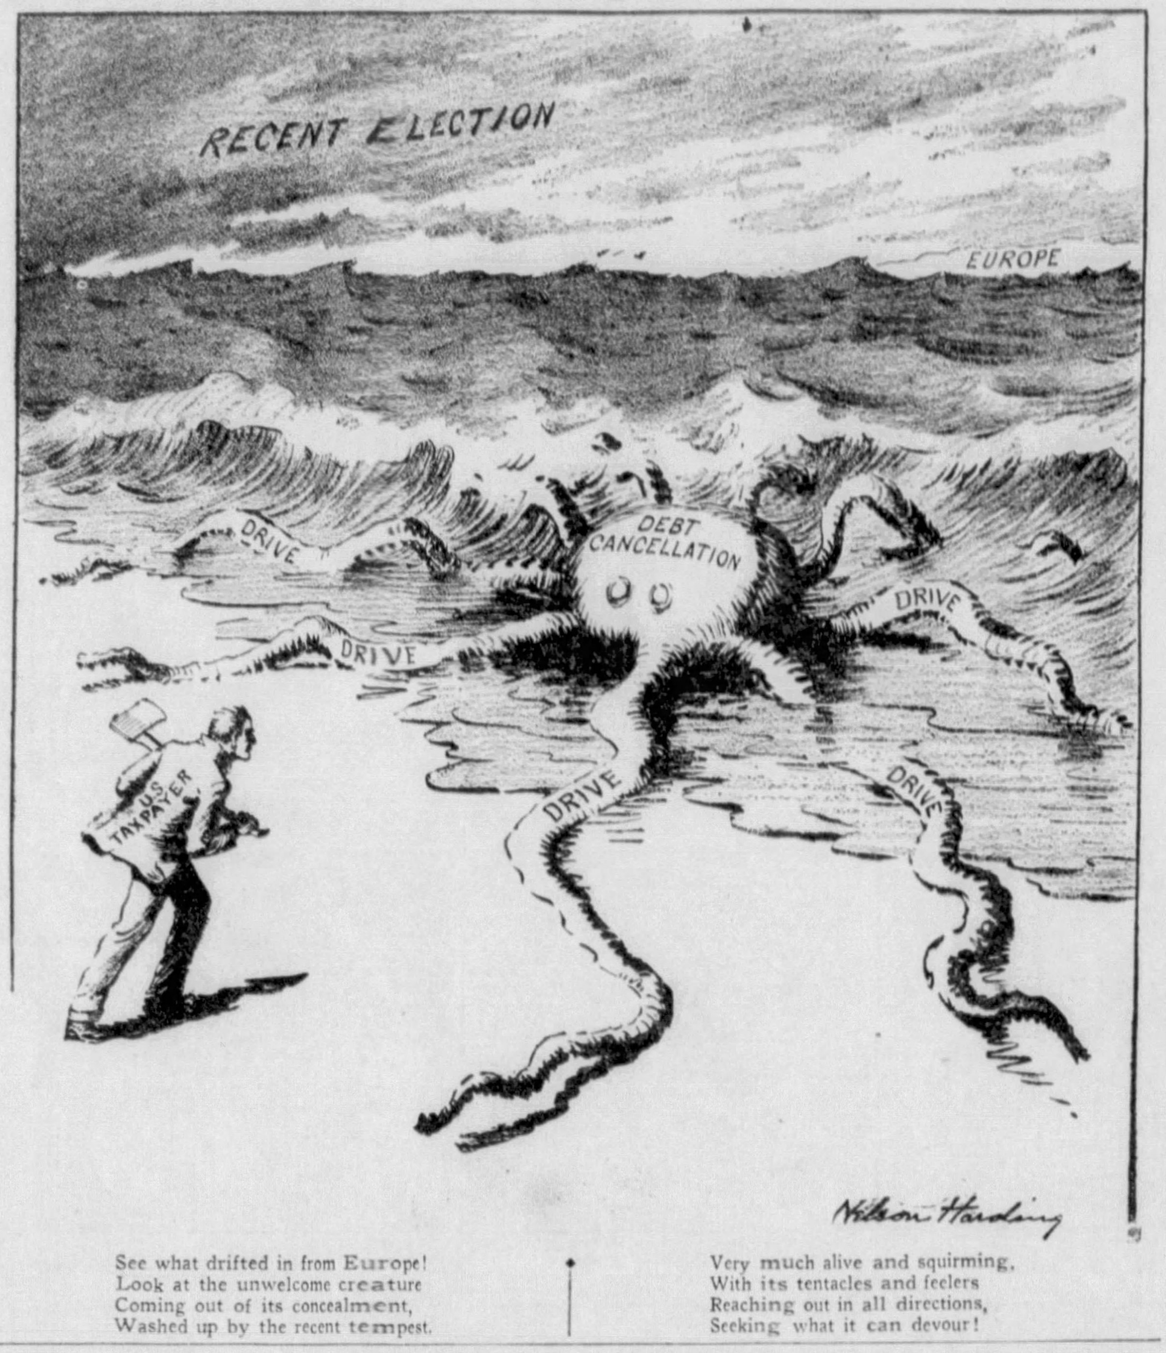
It is alleged that one squire and his constable collected nearly $6,000 from the county in five months by charging for costs in cases which the justice dismissed for lack of evidence. The same justice is said to have taken $106.30 from the taxpayers as his fee for handling cases for the collection of gambling debts, a type of case that has no legal standing in Pennsylvania.

Two "roving constables" and the squire with whom they worked are reported to have collected $2,010 from the county in five months as their fees in liquor cases which were dismissed for lack of evidence.

Many other similar cases have been found by the auditors.

If the Allegheny County members of the Legislature do not move to change this system under which the taxpayers are mulcted by careless or unscrupulous constables and squires, they will be remiss in their duty to protect the people from oppression.

Look What the Storm Brought In -:- By Nelson Harding



See what drifted in from Europe!
Look at the unwelcome creature
Coming out of its concealment,
Washed up by the recent tempest.

Very much alive and squirming,
With its tentacles and feelers
Reaching out in all directions,
Seeking what it can devour!

Man Wants His Illusions

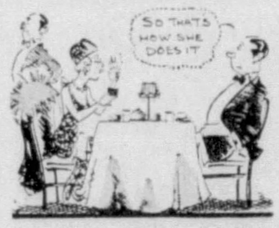
Has woman robbed man of his Santa Claus? Is she a "mental nudist"?

* * *

That is what one "Modern Man" claims. And he offers it as an explanation of why modern lovers are so apathetic and prosaic.

* * *

Everybody has a Santa Claus—a beautiful illusion to which he clings desperately. And the cruelest things you can do is to rob a man of his Santa Claus. Woman's vanity case, claims our critic, has been the grave of all man's illusions! Her frankness has taken the edge off his thrills.



Once upon a time, men believed that a woman came into the world with perfectly marcelled hair, cupid's bow lips, arched eyebrows and smelling of narcissus, gardenias and scented soap.

* * *

But now, all that is over! A man CAN'T disbelieve his eyes and his ears. Every man knows where—and HOW—a woman gets her schoolgirl complexion, her sylphlike figure, her sun-tan glow and even her alluring fragrance.

* * *

He has SEEN her wielding a rouge-puff, while she 'painted on" a nice fresh face, as they sat tete-a-tete in a restaurant. He has watched her touch up her girlish color and repair her "smile," between the oysters and the soup. He has waited patiently, after the demi-tasse, for her to powder her nose and pencil a little extra "shadow" under her eyes, before departing.

Moreover, she has told him, confidentially, just how she keeps that slender silhouette, and has discussed her diet, her calories and her soul secrets with him, quite unblushingly.

* * *

And is he grateful to her for lifting the veil from his eyes and refusing to go on fooling him? Does he appreciate her nobility in "wising him up"?

* * *

Not a bit! He is as hurt and sore as the little boy who has just been told that "there isn't any Santa Claus." He wants his illusions back! He wants his Christmas Eve magic! He wants the excitement and mystery and glamor of guessing! He WANTS to be fooled!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—While theatrical agencies shrink to astonishing minimum, a few carry on. None is so hopelessly brave in disaster as actor folk. Day after day, they drift to remaining waiting rooms, the girls, all airs and graces; the men, never jobless, but "at liberty."

There is little employment and scarcely point in seeking it, but the vision of fame and the handful of lights still blazing bolster sagging hopes. Even today, one still may come upon an actor of comic paper tradition, with nose of red and collar of astrakhan.

Tragedians, whose ambitious argosies foundered long ago, with a speakeasy shot will expand, thrust an arm, Napoleon like, in tattered coat, and exclaim: "When I played with Mansfield—." In the worst season the theater ever knew, the Lambs is the most cheerful club in town.

The actor does not realize his is a heartless, overcrowded profession. His superb belief in himself and future never dims. Tremulous girls, from prairie cottages and village streets, wash their one pair of stockings nightly, and each morning are eager for a new joust with fate.

In a waiting room I saw the usual group. One flashing-eyed maid you felt sure had been told she looked like Grace Allen. An old man with the face of a judge. A youth cut to a hero. A plump mother with dancing twins. The usual quota of vague people. All dreaming in a heart-break house!

* * *

From a Paris bedroom window recently, I looked daily on the shimmer of glass that was Ivar Kreuger's top-loft elysium. And, last evening from Kent Cooper's eyrie, I saw Kreuger's penthouse perched high at Seventy-third and Park avenue. Others occupy it, and, on a terraced plot, a nurse watched a child at play. But what registered, in a mind that blots up only inconsequentials, was the surrounding shrubbery — weeping willows.

* * *

I hear of another pent palace of a Croesus which, in a largesse of roaring luxury, not only has a radio in every room and hall, but in each bedroom is a built-in piano with only the keyboard showing. One slides back a panel and there is a keyboard. A push of a button and—boo!—a piano stool glides out of the nowhere.

* * *

Somewhere, I hear, too, that Eugene O'Neill is America's greatest literary sulker. Anything but extravagant praise for his work sends him to a remote cloister where he sits hours in dour pout, perhaps sulking in trilogies. We had a notion Theodore Dreiser, rocking and twisting his handkerchief into an anguished ball, held the record. We commend to each of the boys a columnist's weekend mail as a cure. In a few weeks, if they haven't stepped off a dock's deep end, they will realize, at least, "they can take it!" And that's something in any language.

* * *

Achieving no greatness writing —(Sudden scream: He's telling us!)—my sympathy for temperament among belles-lettres runs tepid. I see no reason why pursuit of literature entitles one to rudeness or a puff of divine afflatus. Every period has more good writers than earnest readers. Too many scribblers are poseurs, simulating something that never will be. Their trouble is not always artistic, but, rather, pathological. My fun is plugging away on the sidelines and, at rare intervals, turning out a paragraph that embers the glowing thought: "That's not so bad!" This is about as pleasant a victory as mediocrity offers.

* * *

My admiration for Michael Arlen, aside from his deft bizarrerie, is in his sheer joy of being alive. A jack-in-the-box, perpetually on spring, he became a lion of the London drawing rooms, left it for St. Moritz, captured the skiing circles there, and moved on to Paris and the Riviera. He made enough money to provide an annuity, so he writes when the mood grips. The rest of the time he thrills to living, instead of glooming in a corner, wondering how long popularity will last.

* * *

It just occurs, I do not know a writer who looks the part. Doctors, lawyers, actors, bankers, generally run to type. But the only writer who ever looked to me "like his writings" is Arnold Bennett.

* * *

However, Clarence Budington Kelland is the sort of fellow you would easily imagine is known to all intimates as "Bud." And no one, after a good look at a certain writer, would jump from under a hat to hear him called "Odd."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I picked this out of a dramatic review of a popular young movie actress:

"Restless, moody, highstrung, she makes full use of every hour, as if she felt that life is all too short. She is a brilliant example of the modern girl whose courage and ambition thrust all else aside."

That's a nice review. It's going to please the young lady for whom it was written—and it's also going to tickle millions of other young ladies who've been looking for a slick alibi for a lot of their cussedness. Yes, a swell review! But is it true?

IS THE MODERN GIRL REALLY COURAGEOUS AND AMBITIOUS?

Now, I like the modern girl. I know a good deal about her, for I've been running a column for her for the last 15 years. Generally speaking, I think I understand her, and am for her a million. There's no denying that thousands of modern girls are the grandest youngsters this old human race has ever produced. They're brave and sweet, honest, fine and hard working. But—

They aren't all like that. And I'm wondering if most of them are like that.

Is the average modern girl really courageous?

Or is she just a reckless smartie—a dare-devil exhibitionist?

"But look at her flying record!" you exclaim indignantly. "Look how she swims, and drives fast cars, and hunts tigers and—"

Yes; all that is true. She's certainly strong for circus stunts. But do these stunts take real courage? Or do they require simply a redhot desire to show off?

Anyone can be brave when doing a spot-light act that will get a big, resounding hand. But how brave is the modern girl about the things she DOESN'T want to do; the hard, monotonous jobs that get no hand?

How brave is she about marrying a poor man and doing her own housework? Wearing shabby clothes? Giving up amusements? Tackling the job of being a man's partner, as her mother tackled it?

Her defiance of public opinion; her unconventionality; her determination to be free—yes, that's something.

But defiance of public opinion and determination to be free do not necessarily imply courage. They may simply imply selfishness, a ruthless disregard of other people's rights, and indifference toward one's own obligations.

How brave is the modern girl when it comes to self-sacrifice? When it comes to self-discipline? I wonder.

And this matter of ambition—

Healthy ambition is a fine thing, and many a modern girl has it. But is the average girl ambitious—or is she merely greedy? Or discontented and peevish?

Does she want to build a fine life, or does she merely want to get out of a shabby, uncomfortable life?

How can you tell which she is? Watch her performance.

The ambitious woman has a definite goal, and works toward it. She is willing to endure hardship, face the most tiresome training, to get there.

But the greedy person grabs. Grabs and grabs. And if she can't grab what she wants, she goes on to something else.

As a matter of fact, most young women ARE ambitious, though not in the sense the dramatic reviewer meant. They are ambitious to get a man—and all the privileges and perquisites of being a Missis. Which sometimes does them credit. And sometimes doesn't.

"Courageous and ambitious?" Well, maybe.

And again, maybe not.

Text For Today For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.—Hebrews, iv:15, 16.

More Thoughts on The Election

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The common comment today of skilled observers in the field of politics is that Mr. Hoover speedily will be eliminated from leadership in the Republican party. During the Republican convention in June, I set forth in these columns, without quotation by name, the assertion by three outstanding Republicans that there was little hope for party success. These men, who talked confidentially, said that when the expected debacle came there would be a reorganization of the party with the elimination of the influence of Mr. Hoover.

That smacked of politics at the moment, and was dismissed by some as such. But it was the truth, and these leaders could not be quoted directly since they were talking confidentially. Several days after the election everyone is conceding that the prediction in this column will be borne out by action.

It is based on every rule of reason. Mr. Hoover never has been popular with the leaders of his party. He has been a member of it but a short time. His lack of training in the political field has been shown many times in his inability to understand political psychology. Men like Senators Moses and Watson unquestionably ascribe their defeat to the ineptitude of his leadership. And no politicians figuring in such a crushing party disaster ever has been able to come back. Thus in the Republican party we may put it down as certain that we are at the end of a regime.

Voted in a Practical Way

The failure of Norman Thomas to poll a greater vote seems a source of mystification to many. The leader of the Socialists is a brilliant man of pleasing personality and excellent capacity for advocacy, and he made a vigorous campaign which attracted much attention.

His failure to poll a heavier vote than that cast for Eugene Debs in 1920, despite the widespread human misery, is no reflection upon him or his leadership. It merely illustrates anew the rare conservatism of millions of jobless men in this country.

America has cause to be proud of its working classes. They have suffered in silence, with a philosophy all too rare, and refrained from violence even under the provocation of hunger and humiliation. This spirit they have carried into their politics. Most of them are entirely satisfied with our American institutions. They wanted a change in the personnel of those in charge of their operation. They knew that a vote for Mr. Thomas was half a vote for Mr. Hoover, and, as practical men, they voted in a practical way.

The communism we hear so much about was so insignificant that it does not figure in the election news. Socialism, which is vastly different, did not make any headway. Timid ladies and gentlemen, with nervous disorders, who have been seeing red, may find some comfort in the discovery that even under existing conditions the working classes have not departed from the American tradition.

* * *

People Have Adjourned Politics

Almost immediately after the most sensational upheaval in our history, our people have adjourned politics and turned their thoughts to ways and means for restoring prosperity. The foolish thought and idle word passed with the setting and the rising of the sun. The stupid suggestion that Mr. Hoover should resign at once and summon Mr. Roosevelt to his post has properly been ignored by the President, who will resume his duties in a few days and carry on, as he should until his successor is inducted into office in the constitutional way and at the constitutional hour.

The election curtails his activities to a limited degree. He is stopped by every rule of fairness from pressing measures of a purely partisan nature that have been passed upon by the people at the polls.

But the routine business of government can go on, and measures having no party significance and dealing with the problem of restoration and recovery cannot be neglected for four months. These should be considered on their merits and without partisan prejudice by the Democrats during the short session of Congress before the inauguration.

There can only be chaos in the interval if the present administration wills chaos, and its leaders wisely have announced that they will go about the king's business as though nothing had happened to put a period to their services.

* * *

Such Action Would Not Be Sound

The immediate induction of a new President into office would not permit that deliberation and those consultations necessary in the formation of a new government. The choice of a competent cabinet is of paramount importance.

Meanwhile, the suggestion has been made by Alfred P. Sloan, of the General Motors Corporation, that Mr. Roosevelt might lay the spirit of uneasiness in business circles by an immediate announcement of his policies. While the motive for the suggestion is good, such action would not be sound, and nothing of the sort should be necessary to convince the business world that nothing wild or revolutionary is planned by the new President. The general policies, the tone of the on-coming administration, were made quite clear in the campaign by Mr. Roosevelt; and it was in response to these that the greatest majority in history was recorded.

After all, we have party government in America; and party responsibility; and while Mr. Roosevelt now is the acknowledged party leader it would be both dangerous and improper for him at this juncture, and without full consultation with subordinate party leaders, to make an ex cathedra announcement of his plans for working out the pledges that have been made.

The best way is the traditional way in America; a way that makes for common counsel and wise leadership.

* * *

Swept Away With The Debris

A glance at the casualties in the Senate discloses a result as revolutionary in the domination of that body as was the result of the elections of 1910 and 1912. For a full generation, previous to that time, the Senate had been under the domination of a small coterie of men under the leadership of Aldrich, and including Eugene Hale, Julius C. Burrows and John C. Spooner.

During the last 14 years another group has been dominant. This included Reed Smoot, who, as far as fiscal and tariff matters are concerned, has been powerful; Senator Watson, who belonged to the Aldrich school and has been the party floor leader; Senator Moses, whose clever tongue and belligerency made him a strong man on the floor.

These are swept away with the debris of the election.

In Indiana, the friends of Watson were pleading for his re-election on the ground that he had become an "institution"; and so he had. One of the purposes of the people at the polls was to sweep away such institutions.

* * *

The Fall of Reed Smoot

But the passing of Reed Smoot definitely marks the passing of an era. A firm believer in the theory that the primary purpose of government is to serve the ends of Big Business, a tireless student of the intricacies of tariff legislation, he early attracted the attention of Aldrich. He was placed on the Finance Committee immediately. His power was in his mastery of figures, in his phenomenal industry. With the passing of the original Aldrich group he moved to the front; became chairman of the Finance Committee; and sponsored the present tariff act. That he had tremendous power cannot be denied.

The fall of Reed Smoot is like the fall of the Bastile; it marks the dawning of a new day.
